SARSANARILLA MANAGEMENT DE LA COMPANION DE LA

Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla.

N consequence of the very mild weather of the Learning the ments made by the undersigned this Fall for WINTER. WEAD The great beauty and superiority of this Sarsaparilla over all other medicine is, while it eradi-cates disease, it invigorates the body. It is one of the very best Spring and Summer medicines ever known: it not only purifies the whole system and strengthens the person, but it creates new, pure and rich blool—a power possessed by no other medicine. And in this lies the grand secret of its wonderful success. It has performed within the past of disease; at least 1000 of these were considered incurable. More than 8000 cases of Chronic Rheumatism; two years, more than 25,000 cures of severe cases

2000 cases of Dyspepsia; 4000 cases of General Debility and Want of Energy; 7000 cases of the different Female complaints; 2000 cases of Scrofula; 1500 cases of Liver complain:

2500 cases of Disease of the Kidneys and Dropsy; 8000 cases of Consumption; And thousands of cases of all diseases of the blood viz:-Ulcers, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Pimples on the face, &c.-Together with numerous cases of Sick Headache, Pain in the Slde and Chest, Spinal affections, dec. This, we are aware must appear incredible; but we have letters from physicians and our agents from all and every part of the United States, informing us of extraordinary cures. R Van Buskirk, Esq., one of the most respectable Druggists in Newark, N. J., informs me that he can refer to more than 150 cases in that place alone. There are thousands of cases in the city of New York which we will ands of cases in the city of New York which we will refer to with pleasure, and to men of character. The Great Remedy of the Forests. STRONG & OSGOOD'S

Vegetable Phy anthropic Pills. HE Proprietors take this method of making known to the world the most valuable and important discovery ever recorded in the history of medicine.

In testing by chemical experiment, the medicinal properties of a rare plant, which grows along the banks of the Waysepinicon River, in lowa, they discovered that it possessed a healing and restoring power, which in their opinion, in combination with other remedies, the result of their medical researches, would render it a

has been administered in order to tests its power to vast numbers of patients, in the most hopeless cases, such as had haffled the skill of the most eminent physicians, and had proved too obstinate to be removed by any of the nuhad proved too obstinate to be removed by any of the fil-merous remedies of the day, and to the perfect astonish-ment of all, it effected complete and permanent cures; thus brilliantly triumphing, not only over the greatest rem-edies known to the medical, profession, but over all the Pills, Syrups and Panaceas, whose virtues are so loudly trumpeted throughout the length and breadth of the land.

the proprietors challenge the world to produce its equal. It acts in perfect harmony with the laws of nature, and completely purifies the Blood, a vitiated state of which is the cause of all disease. It has been administered in Asthma, Apoplexy, Barbers' Itch, Canker, Catarrh, Cholera Morbus, Colic, Colds, Cough, Consumption, Croup, Cramps and Convulsions, Gancerous Sores and Ulcers, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Dysentery, Epilipsy, Erysipelas, Enlargement of the Spleen, Fever and Ague, Female Complaints, Fevers of all kinds, Gravel, Gout, Hysteries, Inflammation of the Liver, Lungs, Kidneys and Bladder, Indigestion, Jaundee, Leprosy, Liver Complaint, Neuralgia, Palpitation of the Heart, Piles, Scrofula, Spinal Complaint, Salt-Rheum, Scald Head, Syphilis, Suppression of the Menses, Tic Douloureux, &c. Poetry.

From the Dublin University Magizine THE EMBROIDERESS AT MIDNIGI She plies her need e till the lamp Is waxing pale and dun; She heres the watchman's heavy framp, And she must watch like him. Her hands are dry, her forehead damp, Her dark eyes faintly swim.

Look on her work—her blossom flowers, The lily and the rose,-Bright as the gem of summer hours, But not to die like those; HERE, sudeless as in Eden's bowers, For ever they repose.

Once, maiden, thou wert fresh and fair, As those sweet flowers of thine; Now, shut from sunny light and air, How cans! thou choose but pine! Neglected flows thy raven hair, Like the uncaltured vine.

Look on her work!-no common wint Arranged that glowing group Wild wreaths the stately roses bind, Sweet bells above them droop-Ye almost SEE the sportive wind larting the graceful group!

Look on her work!-but look the more On her unwearied heart; And put aside the chamber door That doth the daughter part From that dear mother who before Taught her this cunning art,

She sleeps—that mother sick and pale She sleeps-and little dreams That she, who does her features veil All day, in flitting gleams Of auxious hope, this hour doth hail, But not for happy dreams ..

God bless her in her lone employ, And fill those earnest eyes With visions of the coming joy, Waiting her sacrifice; When they who give her this employ, Pay her its stinted price!

Think how her trembling hand will c The treasures it will hold, With that which seems a greedy gra Yet not for love of gold; That love-that sigh's relieving gasp Its deeper springs unfold.

Think how her hasty feet will roam The market and the street, To purchase for her humble home The food and clothing nicel, And with what gladness she will co Back to this poor retreat!

Poor maiden! if the fair ones who Thy graceful 'brodiery buy, Only one half thy struggles knew. And filial piety. Methinks some drop of pity's dew Would gem the proudest eye!

It is not here its full reward Thy gentle heart will prove! Here ever must thy lot be hard,-But there is ONE above Who sees and will not disregard Thy consecrated love.

FOR THE COURIER. MY FOREST HOME.

BY A B. FLANDERS.

That name, -how delightful my sweet Forest Home, The place of my earliest dreams, How oft 'mid the flowers of the wild woods I've roamed And scaled the hold (Saurel) at the wild Eagle's scream.

The Cottage with roses and jessamine twined, How majestic and stately the trees, While the song of the bird and the zephyr combined, Hath lailed me to sleep while fanned by the breeze.

But where are those scenes, the sweet haleyon of rest, Alas! forever and aye they have flown, While the grey headed sire, the matron who blest, Have here now no Cottage-but in heaven a home.

That old Cottage Bible hatly gone from its place, The song of devotion bath ceased, While he that hath oft invoked blessing and grace, Hath left us and fled to the mansions of peace.

Farewell to the Cottage, the garden of flowers. No more 'midst thy beauty and fragrance I roam; But my mind will return to the song of the bowers, And sigh for the comforts of my sweet Forest Home.

GO AHEAD.

BY GEO. W. LIGHT. When your plans of life are clear, Go ahead-Cut no faster than your brains: Haste is always in the rear; If dame prudence has the reins, Go ahead.

Do you ask too broad a test:

Go ahead.

Go ahead. Lagging never clears the sight: When you do your duty best, You will best know what is right.

Never doubt a righteous cause: Go ahead; Throw yourself completely in: Conscience shaping all your laws, Manfully, through thick and thin, Go ahead.

Do not ask who'll go with you;

Numbers! spurn the coward's plea! If there be but one or two, Single-handed, though it be, Go ahead!

Though before you mountains rise, Go ahead:

Scale them ?- certainly you can: Let them proudly dare the skies; What are mountains to a man! Go ahead.

Though fierce waters round you dash, Go ahead: Let no hardships baffle you: Though the heavens roar and flash, Still, undaunted, firm and true,

Heed not Mammon's golden bell: Go ahead;

Go ahead.

Make no compromise with sin: Tell the serpent he looks well, But you cannot let him in. Go ahead.

Better days are drawing nigh; Go ahead; Making duty all your pride, You must prosper live or die, For all Heaven's on your side, Go ahead.

It is all finished, at least all that is furnished; I value it more highly than I should if it was not so near my mother's.'

'There, William has left this small parlor, this sitting room, and three chambers, to finish at his leisure when he is out of employment. See how every thing is arranged—so handy for my work.'

'You don't say you are going to do your own work?' ·Certainly I do. There is only one apprentice, and should think it strange if I could not do it all with

'Oh, aunt, excuse my laughing-I have yet to learn that a man's honest occupation, whether it produces hard hands, or soft white hands, whether it gives the cheek a brown or pale hue, is any disparagement to him. You must get acquainted with William and hear him converse. You will not think of his hard hand, and his animated, intelligent countenance will drive his bronzed skin quite out of your head. But come, you don't say any thing about my furniture-and you must see my nice closets.3

Oh! your farniture is well enough. The less you have, the less you will have to take care of.'

'Yes, we could not get much furniture. I insisted upon William's taking the money my grandmother left [Sings] me, to pay off a few hundred dollars which he owed for this place, in order to enable us to begin even with the world. We both have such a horror of debt that we are determined never to incur any, if we can possibly help it. See what a nice press for clothes here is.'

'Yes, I always want an abundance of such things .-The drawer is filled with towels-this is for my ironing cloth and blanket, and this closet contains my tin and wooden ware.'

'I declare, Eliza, you are a strange, thoughtful child. I must tell you one thing about Maria, that made us give a good hearty laugh. The Monday morning after she was married, the girl came to ask where the tubs were, and don't you think the child had actually forgotten to buy a tub, clothes-line, or pins. She said it never popped into her head. But la, it wasn't strange, she had never been used to anything of the kind.'

OLD MEDICINE'S MISTAKE. HOW HE SWALLOWED THE WRONG MEDICINE

Dr. Chamberlain, from his skill in treating disease in Mexico, together with his surgical ability, so signally lisplayed at Monterey and Buena Vista, has won from the volunteers the sobriquet of 'Old Medicine.' He has been appointed surgical director of this division of the forces, and was, at the time we write of, on his visit to camp. After the evening parade, Col. Williams very politely invited us all into his marque, to 'take something,' A general introduction to several officers took place, and when Col. Eradbary was mentioned there was considerable of a flutter at his rank, but he immediately calmed it down by saying-'No fighting Colonel, gentlemen!' Caps were easy on military heads at this announcenent. Col. W. called his boy to clean glasses for the guests, and while this operation was proceeding, Bradbury stepped out into a company of the boys, and offered to throw any of the crowd, side hold, just for the honor of Ohio. Kentucky snatched at his offer; but, while the preliminaries were being seitled, the Colonel was summoned away to drink. On an inspection of Col. W.'s liquor chest, it was discovered that all of the first tier of bottles had been cleared; resort was had to the her body, instead of being burned where he could make second, where, he said, was hid away some fine wines periodical pilgrimages to it, and plant flowers around it, and cordials. Some person handed the doctor one of the bottles, which, on smelling. he pronounced black- again set it in a rapid motion. He hurried out to the berry cordial; Bradbury agreed with him, and it being a nice, innocent dram, the doctor poured out half a gill, put in a little water, and tossed it off. He puckered up male called Mrs Farrell, which he quickly took and inhis mouth at the taste, but politely said nothing against terred. the liquor. Brad. tasted three fingers' depth of it next, and he immediately assumed an attitude something like

'I have no objection to a final 'home in the west.' said Brad., but I don't want to be five feet below a Kentucky camp ground.'

After the company had taken a little something to dilute the bitters, we started home, and on the way Brad. was indulging very freely in laughter at the occurrence.

'The idea of being poisoned, seems to please you,' says the doctor. I'll make a capital story, as it now stands, for the thinking if you and me had died from taking some of your 'old medicine,' what a sweet nab it would have

Wife.

An incident, serious in itself, though at the same time laughably ludicrous, lately occurred in New Orleans .-There lived in Barone street, and indeed there lives there still, a poor but industrious couple-Frank Farrel and his wife Mary. If Frank were to die, his excessive wealth, at least, would not preclude the possibility of his 'That,s yer sort-throw her over-what's the dam-

Like a practical moralist improving the current generation; in fact he dyes to live .-Phough a man of known veracity, he gives a coloring to almost everything he touches; and although of strictly abstentious habits, he is frequently seen blue.

Not long since, Mary took the yellow fever, anl Frank being strongly advised to send her to one of the pay-wards of the Charity Hospital, where she would nave the best advice, and medical attendance, he did so. For two days, on which he called to see her several imes, her case continued to be a dangerous one, and Frank remained in a state of suspence, lest her whom he so dearly loved should pass out of existence. On the night of the second day, the physician thought he saw symptoms of improvement, as if the crisis of the case had been past; and this was an announcement which Frank bailed with all the gratification inspired by sincere affection. He went home to his humble residence, and that night had pleasurable and bright dreams about Mary, happy days and a better fortune.

Early in the morning a message came to him from the ho-pital that Mary was dead-that she died at one o'+ clock in the morning-that her corpse was in the dead house, and if it was not taken away before the doctors came they would dissect it. This sad news froze for a noment life's current in Frank's heart, but the idea of being subjected to the scalpel of the unfeeling surgeon, undertaker's, procured a hearse and coffin, went directly to the dead house, where he found the corpse of a fe-

FOR THE COURIER THE DEPARTED ONE. BY A. B. FLANDERS.

----Lay het i' the earth, And from her tair and unpolluted flesh, May violets spring! -- [SHAKSPEARE. Aye, lay her in the silent grave, The fair, unspotted one. Near where the fragrant myrtle waves. And sheds its sweetness o'er the graves, Of Father. Brother, Son.

Aye lay her where the daisies bloom. The lovely lily hangs its head, Where the feathered quoir sings o'er her tomb, And mourn'st that beauty fades so soon, As with the hallowed dead, Lav her where the ivy clings, With fond embrace the circling vines. Twines round her tomb-its leafy wings In concert with the sighing winds, Mourn o'er fair beauty's shrine.

We lay thee loved one by the side. Of those thou held most dear. And joy to think unhallowed pride Together with affliction's tide Can ne'er endanger here.

> From the Utica Observer. THE WHEEL OF LIFE.

I sat beside a cottage hearth, A wheel was standing near-A little infant whirled it round. Then startled back in fear.

Methought the mystic Wheel of Life Was whirled by that fair child, And fast the ever-lengthening cord Was on the spindle piled.

Time, standing near with clicking reel Was counting off the chain; And every month he tied a knot. And every year a skein.

At first the thread was smooth and white No spot or wrinkle there-For Innocence the wheel did turn, For Life's immortal heir,

Soon coarser grew the rolling thread-Uneven grew the skein; And Passion with its crimson dye,

Began to leave its stain. And louder yet the spindle whirled, And quick the wheel flew round,

And fast upon the spool of Life The thread the spinner wound. She sang a fairy-echo song

Which maidens love to sing; As turned the wheel, she little dreamed What magic it would bring.

The ever sunny tinge of Love Entwined its golden hue, And sweeter then the maiden sang, And soft the spindle flew.

Lo! ruby emerald, purple tints! 'Twas Hope prepared the dye, And Fancy drew the picture rare, On which the colors lie.

A little space of Iris dye, Then dark the colors grew; The spinner works with restless hand, And tears the skein bedew.

The flaws grow thicker, and the rolls Are broken here and there; The thread has lost its even gloss, Beneath the touch of Care.

The marring knot of self is seen, And doubt its mildew leaves; So oft Affliction strains the thread, The weary spinner grieves,

But, lo! the rolls are almost spun, And Death, he brings the knife And cuts the band which binds the wheel, Thus ends the thread of Life!

These skeins! oh, may their every thread A cleansing undergo, And whitened by the blood of Christ. Be bleached as white as snow.

The first thing to be done was to have a sale of pews-This proceeded rather slowly, and the prices at which they sold was by no means as had been anticipated .-From this source only twenty thousand dollars came.-An extra subscription was then tried, but only ten thousand dollars could be raised.

'He shall buy!' said S ____, snapping his fingers as a indden thought struck him. 'Do you think you can make him?'

How? What means will you use! Never mind about that. But, mark my words for it, fairly. next Sunday Preston will be the owner instead of the mere tenant of his pew.

I hope so, 'You shall not hope in vain.' The lawyer went to his office and sat down to think. ing-After about half an hour's cogitation, he said aloud.

'Yes, he's the man,' And immediately writing a note, despatched it by his office messenger. In twenty minutes a well dressed man entered, and bowed to the lawyer with a respectful or rather deferential sir,

'Take a chair, Jones-I want to talk to you,' said !

The man seated himself. 'You know we've managed to get confoundedly in debt with our new church.

'Yes; so it seems,' was the assenting reply. 'And some how or other we must manage to get out of debt.'

'If we can,'

'Very well. Then, without any body's knowing what we are about, or suspecting any concert between the church. At the first fitting opportunity he was made us, we can make some forty or fifty pew renters become purchasers, and thus pay the whole debt.' 'How? How? I am curious to know that.'

'Very well, I will inform you. There is Preston belied the truth. The gaining of one like him over to begin with. His pew is a very eligible one, and if he the cause of religion, was therefore a source of no little gives it up, he can't possibly get another without going congratulation to those who regarded things spiritual and far down the aisle; for every good pew in the church is pious-and was looked upon as quite a triumph over the either rented or sold. THE TEAR .- Byron.

When Friendship or Love Our sympathies move, When Truth in a glance should appear, The lips may beguile With a dimple or smile, But the test of affection's a Tear.

Mild Charity's glow, To us mortals below, Shows the soul from barbarity clear, Compassion will melt Where this virtue is felt. And its dew is diffused in a tear.

The man doom'd to sail With the blast of the gale, Through billows Atlantic to steer, As he bends oe'r the wave Which may soon be his grave, The green sparkles bright with a Tear.

The soldier braves death For a fanciful wreath, In Glory's romantic career; But he raises the foe When in battle laid low, And bothes every wound with a Tear.

If with high-bounding pride He returns to his bride, Reno uncing his gore-crimso'nd spear, All his toils are repaid While embracing the maid, From her eyelid he kisses the Tear.

When my soul wings her flight To the regions of night, Anh my corse shall recline on its bier, As ye pass by the tomb Where my ashes consume, Oh! moisten their dust with a Tear.

May no marble bestow The splendor of woe Which the children of vanity rear; No fiction of fame Shall blazon my name, All I ask-all I wish-is a Tear.

In 1756, Colonel George Washington of Virginia, a large, stalwart, well-proportioned gentleman of the most finished deportment and careful exterior; a handsome, imposing, ceremonious and grave personage-visited his firm and much esteemed friend, Beverly Robinson, and promising tory. It must not be supposed that the loyannounced his intention of remaining his guest for many alist friends of the Colonel, George Washington, weeks. At length, wearied by importunity, Washington-then twenty years before his greatness-leaned over the table, played with his glass, attempted to look unconcerned, and whispered to Mr. Robinson the single word 'Mary.' 'Yes?' responded Mr. R. interrogatively, as if unable to comprehend Washington's meaning. 'Is she well? Does she still abide with you?' 'She does,' replied the lady of the mansion.

Washington again became apathetic and contemplalive, while several significant glances passed between the gentleman and his wife. Some five minutes were spent in perfect silence, which was only interrupted by the exit of Mrs. R. from the apartment. to greet with becoming respect. The young lady was Mary Phillipse, sister of Mrs. Robinson and daughter of the owner of the Phillipse

It was perhaps singular; but the time of her appearance and the period of the return of Washington's cordiality, was identical. Strange as it was, too, midnight found this young lady and the Virginia colonel alone and in deep conversation. The conjugal train who had kept them company in the early part of the evening had retired to their bed-chamber. More remarkable than all, daylight found this couple still together. What could have prolonged that interview .-Not mutual love; for the parties preserved a ceremonious distance and the young lady evinced a hauteur that could be matched only by her companion in after years. And yet the truth must be told. There was love on one side; the colonel smitten by the graces and rare accomplishments of a lady as beautiful as nature's rarest works, was endeavoring to win her heart in exchange for his own. He made his confession just as the cold grey of the dawn of morning broke up the dark clouds in the east, He confessed, in cautious and measured terms, it is true, the extent of his passion and avowed what it was his earnest hope would be the result: The lady hesitated. Was it the modesty of the maiden who dares not to trust her lips with the confession of affection it is her heart's desire to make? No! She respected, although she did not love her interlocutor, and she felt diffident in making known to him the true state of her feelings. At last candor triumphed over delicacy, and she informed Washington in set terms that she loved another! She refused him! The greatest shines like a rich gem in the pages of the world's hisfing his candle, commenced turning over the yellow leaves of the ancient volume, in order to find that portion of it which tells of Daniel's deliverance from the jions den, as that he considered the nearest of any similar to his situation the only very material difference being, Daniel was in the lions den and unable to get out, while Jack was m what he considered as bad a place and had to go out.

Jack had not turned over more than thirty pages, when suddenly his eyes rested upon something lying between the leaves. With a cry of joy he seizes it in his hands, and holds it up to the light. It is a bank note!can he believe it ?-- and for one thousand pounds ?--Quickly he turned over another leaf:-another note, and for the same large amount! Lucky Jack, all thy woes are ended! Precious leaves, twenty of them each concealing the same amount, making in all twenty thousand pounds! Dear, dear old Bible!-and he fairly clasps it to his heart and rolls back with it upon the bed in joy.

* * * * * * The first thing Jack did upon the following morning, was to look into the precious book and assure himself that he had not been dreaming, and the next, after getting change for one of the notes, to pay Mrs. Jones, which he did to that lady's untter amazement. He also startled all his other creditor's in a like manner, and could afterwards walk the streets without molestation. Jack says it somehow got wind that he had become heir to a large fortune, and it was astonishing how the number of his friends (?) increased in consequence of it

Jack Bramble is now a married man, with a large family; and, although he loves his wife, -and there is not just such another m the whole universe,-and although he dotes upon his children, and thinks them a inttle smarter than any body else, yet better than all doca he love the old volume that brought him such good fortune; and as Jack has become a very soher fellow, and a member of meeting besides, he says his uncle was right after all; and even if there had been no money in it, he

In this town, 2d inst., Mr. Aaron Naurse, aged 79 years. The deceased was always a resident of that portion of the town in which he died. When Gov. Gage occupied the Collins House, he, then a lad of six years, was accustomed to carry milk to the governor and his hous hold. The scenes of the Revolution he remembered with great distinctness. He was familiar with the progress and growth of Danvers, and his strong memory, quick perception, and ready utterance, made him an agreeable and instructive companion. He died much respected, and left a large circle of friends who deeply 7th inst., after a long and distressing illness, Mr Enoch

IN THE WORLD.

THIS extract is put up in quart bottles; it is six times cheaper, pleasanter and warranted. Superior to any soid. It cures diseases without vomiting, purging, sickering or debiliteting the patient.

The great benaty and superiority of this Sursaparılla over all other Medicines is, while it eradicates diseases to invigorates the body. It not only purfies the whole system and strengthous the person but it creates new, pure, and rich filood; a power possessed by no other medicine. And in this lies the grand-secret of success it has performed within the last two years, more than a soil of cases in the city of New York which we will refer to with piecsure, and to me of character.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser. A COLD IN THE HEAD.

A cold in the head! What need be said Uglier, stupider, more ill-bred; /I nost a y ther disease May be romantic, if you please; If you have a fever, you're laid on the shelf To be sure-but then you pity yourself. And your friends' anxiety highly excited, The curtains are drawn, and the chamber lighted Dimly and sofily, pleasanter far, Than the staring sunshine that seems to jar Every nerve with a separate knock, And at all our mortal calamities mock.

> As bad as it seems, To be steadily, cleverly, nicely sick; Talk as you please, In certain degrees. Every one likes to take their ease, Likes to be tended and nicely fed, Petted and waited on, and put to bed. And got up in the morning carefully, Like a lord or lady of high degree.

It's not by no means

But a cold in the head! Your eyes are red, Your upper lip is all swelled and spread, You talk in a tone, most unlike your own, A mixture of snuffle and sneeze and groan : Your head aches, your eyes smart, you haven't a thought

That can comfort or rouse You, or profit you aught. You think of what Aaron once offered to Moses, And wished he'd agreed to the cession of noses; He cared too much for the fashion, to think What a comfort t'would be on this shivering brink Of Greenland and Iceland, New England y'clept, If we had not the noses his negative kept.

Who do you suppose Ever pitied a man for blowing his nose? Yet what minor trial could ever be worse, Unless it be reading this blundering verse, Never fit to be written or read, No-nor said,

Except by a man with a cold in his head.

From the Lady's Book. SHALL I BE GRAY? BY T. HEMSTEAD.

When a few more Springs have bloomed and passed Our hills and vales among, And the Autumn winds o'er the grave of flowers A few more dirges sung; When each scene that was dear to my youthful eyes Shall grow dim in the after day, And my soul shall pant for the pathless skies, Oh, tell me, shall I be gray?

When they who were dear to this heart of mine Have lest me, one by one, And the forms that I loved as a mother loves, Are cold 'neath the church-yard stone; When each youthful joy it was mine to share, As a tale hath passed away, And earth is 'reft of its early charms, Oh tell me, shall I be gray?

When I shall stray by the ancient wall, And beneath the spreading yew, Where youthful love with ardent hand Its rude memorials drew: While I search in vain for some cherished trace Of those that have passed away As the much-loved name from the hoary trunk Oh, tell me, shall I be gray?

When life, grown old, no longer wears The hues it earliest wore, And my heart shall yearn for the light of eyes I may meet on earth no more; When this brow of mine hath other lines Than it wore in my early day, And my eye is dim with the mists of time, I know that I shall be gray!

CAN'T GET ALONG.

'I don't know how it is,' said Felix Hall, that some paople can get along so completely on a thousand dollar a year. We can't do it.'

'I'm sure I try to economize all I can,' returned Mrs. | keep one girl, and do nearly all my sewing.

'I do not blame you, Harriet,' said Mr Hall: I know you work hard-too hard-I often wish it was easier for you. But what can I do? My salary is only a thousand dollars. And yet that is all Hawkins receives, -and he seems to get along smoothly. He lays by-so I am told -a cool hundred every year.'

'I don't see how they do it,' replied Mrs Hall. know Mrs Hawkins does not labor half so hard as I do, though her house is always in better order than mine.-They have better furniture than we have, and I am sure Mrs Hawkins clothes' cost double what mine do. 1 don't think it is my fault.'

'I don't say it is, Harriet. I believe you do your part the best you know how. But something must be wrong somewhere. Other people can live very well on a thousand dollars, while we are always owing bills to this, ^that and to the other. Here is the quarter's bills for groceries, amounting to sixty-five dollars, and I seventy to my tailor besides. Then there is an unsettled bill at the provision store of fifteen or twenty dollars, besides the rent, bread bill and milk bill, and I don't know how ma-

'I wish these bills were not allowed to run on; I am sure it would be a great deal better to pay for everything

'So it would, but we have no money to do it with. It takes nearly my whole quarter's salary, regularly, to pay off the bills of three months, and then there is no way to live but-to go on trust for almost everything for three months longer. It is a bad system, I know, but there appears to be no help for it.'

And in the full conviction that there was no help for i Mr Hall drew his quarter's salary of two hundred and fifty dollars, and paid off bills and borrowed-money debts to the amount of two hundred dollars. Then, after giving his wife ten dollars for the purchase of small articles, he started on a new quarter with but forty dol dollars of debts, there was almost as much more hanging over him. He was almost di couraged.

Mr Hall was a clerk in a bank, where he was engaged regularly, from eight in the morning until four-someimes later-in the afternoon. He lived in a house for which he paid two hundred dollars a year, and hi s tailor received annually about one hundred and fifty dollars of his income. He carried a gold watch that had cost eighty dollars, and wore a chain for which he paid forty. He also indulged in one or two expensive breast-pins. and before his family had become as large as at present, had spent a good deal of money in jewerly for his wife. But the dropping in of one child after another until the number grew to five, interfered with these little in dulgences very materially, and called so loudly for self-de. nial that the appeal could not be entirely disregarded.

But the self-denial, as is usually the case, was pretty much all on one side. Mrs Hall denied herself almos very thing, while he went on, in most things, about the same as he did when he and his wife paid eight dollars a week for their boarding, with just the same income they had at present. But let us look a little more closely in his way of doing things, and see if it is possible to discov at what appeared so great a mystery to him.

On the day after Mr. Hall had spoken to his wife so despondingly, he spent, for tobacco and cigars, eighteen and three-quarters cents; for a luncheon and a glass of n toys for the children, fifty cents. He also bought a nottle of wine, for which he paid seventy-five cents .-his barber's bill for three months, which was three dol- I wish, in my heart, you would take it, and see if you lars and-a-half. Then came the bill of Sambo Brooms, the bootblack, which was two dollars Luncheon, and some cakes and candies for the children, cost twenty five she said: cents; and a very neat paper-folder, that struck his fancy, the trifle of twenty-five more. On the third day, he hired a thereby save about sixty dollars a year.' chaise and rode out with his family, after he had left the bank in the afternoon. The chaise-bire was a dollar and a half, and tolls and refreshments fifty cents more.— Already, in luncheon, eigars, and one or two other little matters, a half-dollar had been expended in the morning; so that on the third day, three dollars more were 'put through.' During this time, for marketing, shoes for as you say for one year; and if you bring down the cost one or two of the children, and sundry expenses incident of living as much as a hundred dollars, I will entrust to a large family, six dollars melted from the hands of money matters to your care ever after. Mr. Hall

On the evening after the ride, Mr Hall took out his nocket-book and counted his money. To his astonishment, and almost dismay, he found he had only about twenty-three and-a-half. He counted it over and over again, but could not make it a cent more. Three days before he had forty dollars! Where could sixteen and a half dollars have flown to? He had never spent it—he knew he had'nt-his wife must have made a nocturnal descent upon his breeches-pocket, unbeknown to himhe would ask her—he did ask her.

'Harriet, have you taken any money from my pocketbook within a day-or-two?"

'No, certainly not; what should I want money out of your pocket-book for? You gave me ten dollars, and I fresh supply. have eight and a half of it left.

How else could it have disappeared? 'Some one must have given me the wrong change. I gave William the carriage driver, a five dollar bill. Let ne see. It was a note, and I took it for three dollars; and again he ran over the little roll of bills in his pocketbook. 'Yes here's a three dollar bill; he gave me the right change,' Mr Hall's mind was in great perplexityhis income was small enough compared to his expenses and, therefore to lose eight or ten dollars, he felt to be no trifling matter. 'Suppose you count up what you have spent,' sugested Mrs. Hall, 'and see how much it is, exactly .-Perhaps you have laid out more than you think for." 'I have not spent one half of sixteen dollars. But we will reckon it up, nevertheless. In the first place, the expenses of marketing, shoes and sundries that went into the family, were recalled with some effort, and six dollars were thus accounted

The items were soon summed up, and the product was found to be nearly two dollars and a half.

"Which reduces it to five dollars and a half," reparked Mrs. Hall. 'So it does,' exclaimed the husband, who began to nistrust how the cat would eventually jump. How money does slip through one's fingers! I can hardly believe it! But where is the balance? Where are the five dollars and a half? Even that is too much to lose, Let me see.'

He thought a moment, and then springing to his feet with as much energy as if he had discovered the secret of perpetual motion, he said :

'Yes! That's it! Razors and blacking-brushes!-Suddle-chops and Brooms! I paid my barber's and port-wine-sangaree, twelve and a half cents more; and my boot-black's bills, which, when added together, shall misst on one thing, and that is that you get a excites an eager interest on both sides of the great pond, make just five dollars and a half. After reciprohree months' salary, in order to pay it back again.

By extra exertions, and a system of almost pinching conomy, Mrs. H. managed, during the second quarter, pay the rent and a few small bills, and got through without asking her husband for a cent more; so that when the salary became due agam, she had a much larger sum to start with. From that time, not even a baker's bill was permitted to accumulate; and even her milk-bill was settled once a week.

Mr. H. sometimes complained a little at his wife's 'short commons,' as he called them, and at being out off from all pleasure-taking; but she consoled him, by $750 in change, in the bargain .- N. Y. Amer. Repub. telling him, good-humoredly, to wait awhile-that bet-

AN ADROIT TRICK .- A lady elegantly and fashion ably dressed, of prepossessing appearance and manners, topped in a coach at one of the fashionable stores at this season of bustle and business, to examine some cestly shawls. She was shown up stairs into the shawl room, where one of the partners of the firm attentively waited upon her. After examining and discarding a number, she selected one for $250. It was not exactly have left from my last quarter's salary-after keeping the article she wanted in color and finish; yet it came the nearest to what she required. She would call in at some of the other stores and if not better suited would take that shawl, which was laid aside for her. In about an half an hour her carriage drove up to the store again, and she went up stairs into the shawl room to take the article, not having been fortunate enough to suit book; but it was a month before his wife required a herself elsewhere; she would like, however, to go into an examination of the whole invoice, when, after some One of Mrs. Hall's acts was to buy blacking and time consumed in the inspection, she finally determined give it to the man; I gave it to humanity.

After a great many reciprocal regrets and rummagble, there lay the purse with the glittering still clasp and ornaments. The lady was overjoyed-the store keeper sure enough, there was the $1000 note, the two 50's, cal congratulations and many wonders how such an accident could possibly have happened, she handed the $1000 note, received $750 in change, was handed in her carriage, and she told her coachman to drive to Mrs -'s, Broadway, and off he drove. On settling the cash at night the $1000 note was found to be a counterfeit or an altered note, and the lady not yet found. The clever ruse of losing her purse, describing its contents, finding it and the contents being exactly as described, ren o ed all suspicions of deception at once. So the fashionable stere keeper lost his $250 shawl, and

THE DEATH OF A CHILD. No one feels the death of a child as a mother feels it. Even the father cannot realize it thus. There is a vacancy in his home, and a heaviness at his heart; there is a chain of association that at times comes round with its broken link; there are memories of endearment, a keen sense of loss, a weeping over crushed hopes, and a pain of wounded affection. But the mother feels that one has been taken away who was still closer to her heart. Hers has been the office of constant ministration. Every gradation of Something in our favor, I think. Mr. Willing, with a prudence and foresight that may then ridiculed as visionary, politely but firmly refused the hand of his daughter, assigning at the same time this memorable reason for his refusal :- "The revolution of France is not yet over; the fate which has befallen the unhappy Louis XVI, may overtake his family; and the revolution may at last wind up, as did the commonwealth of England, by recalling the royal family to the throne. In that case, you my friend, must be king, then what would become of my daughter? Your laws would compel you to repudiate her-the marriage would be annulled, and her happiness would be sacrificed. NOT DEAD. BY JOHN STEINFORD KIDNEY. I could not think her spirit fled, I could not make my sweet love dead; Though oft they told me she was gone, And 'twes but dust I looked upon, I could not make her dead.

She lay as if in dreamy rest, Her hands meek folded on her breast; Her lips which knew no word of guile, Half parted with a beaming smile; I knew she was not dead.

Ent when I pressed her sweet lips twain, And felt no kiss pressed back again; And in her eye no tears could see, When mine were flowing mournfully, I knew that she was dead.

My hand stole o'er her marble breast; No gentle throb disturbed its rest: No thought for me lay there divine, As the rock heeds not the red sunshine; I knew my love was dead !

I saw it all; the pure t soul That ever earth held in control, Had hushed its sweet, melodious tone; I knew that I was left alone. I knew my love was dead.

Sleep came; and bathed in its smooth stream Her spirit floated through my dream; The same sweet smile and form were there, The same pale rose wreath d in her hair: My dear love was not dead

She whispered me of sunny lands Where time moved not by dropping sands; Of singing-birds and chanting streams; Of scenes more fair than pictured dreams: To which her spirit dear had fled.

Morn came-a tear was on my cheek: Of joy, or grief, I could not speak: The dead love by my side lay shriven, The living love was blessed in heaven, In truth sie was not dead.

THE CHRISTMAS HOLLY. BY ELIZA COOK.

The holly! the holly! oh, twine it with bay-Come, give the holly a song; For it he'ps to drive stern winter away, With his garment so sombre and long. It peeps through the trees with its berries of red, And its leaves of burnished green, When the flowers and fruits have long been dead, And not even the daisy is seen. Then sing to the holly, the Christmas holly, That hangs over peasant and king; While we laugh and carouse 'neath its glittering boughs To the Christmas holly we'll sing.

The gale may whistle, and frost may come, To fetter the garging rell; The woods may be bare, and the warblers dumb-But the holly is beautiful still. In the revel and light of princely halls, The bright holly branch is found; And its shidow fells on the lowliest walls, While the brinning horn goes round. Then drink to the holly, &c.

The ivy lives long, but its home must be Where graves and rains are spread; There's beauty about the cypress tree, But it flourishes near the dead: The laurel the warrior's brow may wreath, But it tells of tears and bloo !. Sing to the holly, and who can breathe Anght of that that is not good! Then sing to the holly, &c.

Danvers, Oct 16, 1847. MECHANICAL AND DENTAL

SURGERY. Mineral Teeth, with False Jaw and Gnms, of a than have ever yet been made; and we invite the attention of our friends and customers as we shall make the wishes of all—Springs entirely dispensed with—Succession of the composition tion Plates used, that will resist a weight of 16lsb. N preparing ardifical teeth for all sorts of mouths, a thousand difficulties arise, that but few are qualified to overcome. This is especially the case with whole and half sets. It is not only necessary that the plates on which the teeth are mounted have a perfect and easy lit, with a suction sufficiently powerful to confine them easy iit, with a suction sufficiently powerful to confine them to the jaw, without those troublesome appendages so commonly worn, the spiral springs; but the exact proportion of all the teeth and gums to be inserted, must correspond in every particular with those given us by nature: and to accomplish this in the ordinary way is wholly impossibly. As no definite rule can be haid down for the guitance of the manufacturer, of course, much will depend on the experience, ingenuity, and correct taste of the artist, in combining in the work all that is requisite for perfect substitute. By the loss of the natural teeth, the organs of specch are seriously affected, and will remain so, to a very considerable extent, until the prestoration of the dental sounds. This cannot be effected without restoring to the mouth the exact and precise amount it has lost. If the subspitting have more or loss in amount, the speech will be tart it, and mastication would be awkward in the extense. If the teeth have been removed by disease, and much of the dental ridge and jaw-by absorption, science must seek out a remedy and art must constit. This has been clare it, and mastication would be awkward in the extreme. If the teeth have been removed by disease, and much of the dental ridge and jaw-by absorption, science musiscek onta remedy, and art must apply it. This has been seached, su cessially done—the great desideration has been reached, andthe subject is no longer invested with doubt and particularly. All that is requisite, is found in the Carving work; where the artistinay contend even with nature for the mastery. In this new style of work, the whole substitute, jaw, gums, and teeth, are wrought from an imperishable mineral composition, with all the exact proportions or nature, with its life-like tints and shades.

The correctness of this theory must be obvious to all who will give the subject a moment's consideration. The addresses itself to, and is in accordance with, the dictates of common sense; and in no other way can a good set of teeth be got up, that will give entire satisfaction. Therefore the begot up, that will give entire satisfaction. Therefore many other advantages in this mode of preparing and setting artificial teeth, that can only be understood and imperciated by an examination of specimens that may be seen at the subscriber's office. They consist of whole and half sets, and a variety of cases of smaller magnitude, where much difficitly of execution is overcome.

In addition to the above, not less important to the community is that of filling teeth in a thorough and skilful manner. Probably not more than one dentist out of twenty-five, as we find them in city or country, is qualified for this part of his profession. In order to save a tooth by lifting, it is important that the dental cavity be properly prepared to receive a plug, and then filled by a particular precess, which is only known to but few; and if this be atteded to in season, before the exposure of the nerve, there can be not possible doubt of its saving the tooth for life—unparticular process, which is only known to but few; and if this be attended to is some extent approved by the Trade, at least so far as the Imitations lately introduced give evidence of their approbation of the only irue and perfect system which ENSURES TO BUYERS every description of every description of the constitutionally intended to its saving the tooth for life—unless it be constitutionally inhealthy. As there is so much inferior work in this branch of dentistry, pafined off by the community, so as to guard against inposition: they are few in number, and may become familiar to all.

Sure there are, sir, but they ask rent for them, 'And did you get a house without rent, girl?'

Yes, sir, my dear father that's dead bought the little Mr Muggins, the grocer. He's dead and gone, and father never got a deed, and now his son wants the ground to build stores on. I wanted to ask you whether it wa law to do such a thing, but I didn't dare to.'

Your father, Betty, never paid for the house, I suppose, but held it subject to a mortgage which is now to be foreclosed. But don't take on about that, girl-if the interest was regularly paid you will have a handsome share of the proceeds. But the interest wasn't paid, sir. Mr Muggins was speculator, says our right is ontlawed and that we may to inquire for. This difficulty thus surmounted, before of thou must fight and kill thy enemies, thou art bound think ourselves well off that we have got our reat so long for nothing. It's cruel for such a family, and mother so poorly, to be turned out of house and home.'

Don't you fret, Betty; broil another mackerel, and see that the toast is just right, and I will look after this

"Think you, sir."

But, Betty, who was your father? 'He was a man that made boots and shoes, sir.' ·No, I mean what was his name—his Christian name. 'Oh! James Lewis, at your service.'

'And your grandfather ?' His name was Joshua. But it was written Levis-Joshua Levis, sir—in the big Bible.'

Hem! indeed; well I shall look after the matter. Go and get the mackerel.'

Betty withdrew, and the profound genealogian ruminated on what might amount to a discovery.

Indeed, this meets the case. By the old titles it appears that a Joshua was the grandson of the rich Abram Lovis, and his family was supposed to be extinct .-Here it is; the name has been changed to Lewis, by a very common freak or accident. This is an important matter to Betty, but I will not break it to the girl at present.' So soliloquized the deep Mr. Langtree, till the revised breakfast had been duly swallowed, when a ring of his office bell announced the arrival of perhaps a client-an unusual circumstance.

It was no other than young Christopher Muggins-the sole heir of Joseph Muggins, and the proprietor of the property which Betty's mother, with her seven children younger than Betty, had been warned to quit. The said warning had excited her neighbors against him, and he had come to ask what he considered the profoundest legal advice in a case of rather crooked title.

A very clear case and a straightforward proceeding, Mr. Muggins,' replied the venerable Langtree, after having listened to the voluble statement of the little of the ground floor. He was as stately a person as you quick-spoken, squatty-fermed, pug-nosed Mr. Muggins. Your right of enter upon the premises is unquestionable. How astonishingly real estate has appreciated. Why, headed cane in his hand as sure as he walked abroad,— Mr. Muggins, would you think it, the residum of the grent Levis estate in Chesnut-st has risen to nearly half He was never puzzled in law, one reason of which was a million and I have just this morning discovered a new that he had very few gases, and cared very little for heir whose share will doubtless not be less than a cool

These supient thoughts brought Muggins to the conclusion to strike while the iron-in his own mind-was 'Well, and what is that to cry about? Are there not hot. The girl was nobody but a hired cook, and she would jump at an offer from a thriving citizen of his standing. He was inexperienced in such negotiations, to be sure, but there must be a first time. Why should there be any more fuss in this case than in making any house in Mulberry street, where my mother lives, of old other bargain? Slight doubts and hesitancies were thus brushed away, and Muggins' resolution crystalized to the tense of forthwith.

> But here arose a difficulty. He did not even know the name of the lady. He would have to go by guess, and some confounded mistake might occur. He knew very well that Mr. Langtree had but two women servants, and it could not be likely that he would recomnend the housekeeper as marriageable, who was almost as old as himself, and seemed never to have been you mean to insult me, or are you in earnest? younger. He could not have meant her. It must be the cook, and if her name wasn't Levis, that would do dinner time Mr. Muggins rang the house hell, and was shown by the waiter to a little back-parlor or tea-room, and kill them in love. 'I wish to see Miss Levis, your cook that is,' said Muggins to the boy.

'O, you mean Betty Lewis-she cooks here. 'Yes, just so, I had forgotten her name,' replied Muggins, not taking a seat nor looking at any thing in particular, but jerking about the room, as nervous as if he were putting a match to a Paixhan. Betty directly made her appearance, a tidy and comey person, though as we have already hinted with eyes Muggins was taken entirely aback. and Betty was little less surprised, insomuch that silence reigned for half minute at least. The hasty suitor at length broke silence, having deliberated much in the half minute.

Why, Betty Lewis, I didn't think I would find you here!

·Where else could you find me? I have hardly been invwhere else for these five years '

'Sure I hadn't seen you, but I thought you must have one into the countryt You look just as you did when we used to have such fine times at the cotillon parties.' Yes, but times have changed since then. I suppose you have come to see about the house that mother is

'No, not at all, but I came to have a talk with you. 'And yet you didn't expect to find me here! Why, Mr. Muggins, is it fair in you to turn us out of that house and make us lose all that father paid and all we've 'Never you mind, Miss Betty, it'll come right at last I've heard that you are related to the Levis family.'

'And what if we are? How does that help us to house? But it's new to me, only I know that grandfather's name was written Levis in the big Bible. But he made shoes for his living and so did my father till he couldn't get a living by it and died broken-hearted.'

Muggins now thought he saw through the mill-stone so he replied, 'Don't distress yourself about the house a all, if its mine its yours, Miss Betty, I've come to say that'-and he seized her hand as with a steel vice. 'No. Mr Muggins. This is too sudden. Putting you vords and deeds together I cannot understand you. Why, as to deeds, Betty, I'll have a deed of the house made out to your mother and give it to her then

Well, perhaps I shall Perhaps! Why, how can you help it?'

'Yet excuse me, Mr Muggins, if I wait in suspense to

'I'll have it done to-night.' 'The coner the better.

'And when I've done it you'll say yes?' Let me see it done before I give any promises if you please, Mr Muggins,'

So they parted, for Muggins was a man of despatch The next thing was to go to his no ary and have the deed made out to Mrs Dorothy Lewis and her heirs and assigns forever. The next day it was duly signed, sealed and delivered, and made the family about as happy as their skins could hold.

Now for the courtship. But we are sorry to inform the reader that it will never be written, and that there can be no marriage than there has been love in this tale -for as soon as Mr Langtree had been told by Betty of the delivery of the deed, he ascertained that the Joshua Levis who was in the line of geneological connection with brought upon the prisoner would serve as a warning to after, he very coolly informed him of that fact as a reas- | who heard him were inclined that way, he hoped they on why it would not be proper or profitable for him to would seek to regain the path of sobriety, which is the --- Chronotype.

An Unanswerable Argument against sincere repontance, and earnest and persevering prayor War.

BY H. C. WRIGHT.

About fifteen years ago, I was at a hotel in the city of partment of the government shall appoint. Providence, Rhode Island. In front of the hotel was a noble elm, and under its spreading branches scats were placed for the accommodation of the guests. Here I sa emphatically attered by the chief justice, and then the eresting, and I threw it down, and looked round for a more animated companion. Near me sat a very old man, in the garb of the religious Society of Friends, or word, hurriedly put on his cap, and almost rushed out Quakers. He sat cross-legged on his chair, his hands of the court room with the officers. When he got into erous offer of marriage, before she should know any locked together on his lap, his broad-brimmed hat on the street, he gave voice to his pent-up-rage in the most his head, and his countenance calm and serene. He ap- dreadfur oaths and unprecations against the judges, his peared to be lost in meditation. I looked at him for a family, mankind and the Almighty; and after he was noment, hesitating to interrupt him; but finally we entered into conversation, which turned upon the views of Friends on the subject of military defence. Thinking it would be easy to show the futility and absurdity of those views, I stated my arguments in favor of defensive resistance. He listened attentively, and then addressed me in nearly these words: Well friend, thou believest it right to kill thy enemics n self-defence ?'

'What! Do you mean to say that I should allow an assassin to enter my house, to kill my wife and children, without making any resistance? No, I would plaster the wall with his brains, before I would suffer him to do so.' 'Friend,' said the old man, 'I hope thou wilt plaster the wall with his brains all in love.

'And I suppose, if I were the master of a merchant vessel at sea, and a pirate came down upon me, you would advise me not resist him. For my part, I think I should give him and his crew to the sharks.'

But,' said the old man, in a tone of unaltered kindness and secenity, 'thou must give them to be food for the sharks in love, for thou bast acknowledged it to be thy duty to love thy enemies.

What could I reply? The old man had brought conviction to my mind. I reflected for a moment, and then said, Well, my good friend, you have convinced me that I must renounce either Christianity or military defence. I clearly see that swords and guns, battles and bloodshed, are inconsistent with Christian love.

HUNNEWELL SENTENCED TO DEATH. In the Supreme Court at East Cambridge, yesterday, George Hunnewell, convicted last week of burning his mother's house, was brought in for sentence. When asked if he had any thing to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, he remained mute, pressed his hands upon the rail of the dock, sat down, and rested his head near Somerville, a stone thrown by some malicious ner-upon his hands in such a manner as to conceal entirely his face. Chief Justice Shaw then addressed him upon the terrible circums ances of his crime, and the almos, infinite depravity of mind and heart which it indicated He had made the most cruel and dastardly attacks upon his mother's honor and peace. He had so long kept her in such a state of alarm and by his threats and violence, that she was, distressing as it must have been to a mother's feelings, compelled to procure his restraint by imprisonment, and his conduct when restored to liberty proyed that her fears were but too well founded. After familiarizing his mind with the atrocious idea, he carried into execution his cherished and most unhappy and manevolent revenge. The crowning act of his guilt was the destruction by fire of the sick and helpless brother,-That feeble and harmless brother was sacrificed to his malice, and his death was under the circumstances, mur-

A SABBATH ON THE FIVE POINTS.

A stroll through the Five Points, on a Sunday, is a something which should be practiced by every one who desires a knowledge of human nature. All classes and conditions are there to be seen, from the man of honor and affluence, to the thieving and drunken beggar. On one corner is a church, in which are decent persons worshipping, while on the opposite one is a groggery, filled with base men and women, blaspheming that name which is worshipped by the others. The "old brewery?' of notorious celebrity for rum and d struction. stands about the centre of the place, a kind of head quarters, with its many doors thrown open, inviting the base creatures who frequent the Points to spend the last farthing for the poisonous draught. In the interior of that building, poverty and misery are depicted in almost every countenance. Some twelve or fourteen families occupy the upper part, which is partitioned of doors or windows, and containing a poor emaciated woman, with several half starved and naked children around her, crying for bread. Pestilence is almost always there, It has not been many months since a woman, who was sick in that house, was fastened up in her room, because of delirium, and left to starve. Sha 'And suppose a robber meets me on the highway, and was found dead; and resting its head upon her cold and lifeless bosom, a child suffering the 1 st agony of starthe outrage! CORN COBS.

A friend who had read an article in some pup recommending corn cobs, ground or anground, as g stituting a valuable feed for stock, undertook to test-the truth of the statement for himself. He had a large quantity on hand, and having provided himself with a proper vessel-(a half-hogshead tub,) he filled it with cobs, and then with a solution of salt in water. In this steep the cobs were suffered to remain till they had imbibed a sufficiency of the fluid to render them soft. In this condition they were fed out to his stack-half a peck to a full grown cow or ox in the morning, and the same quantity at night. He remarks that all his animals are extremely fond of them, and that they consume a much less quantity of hay and grain than before he commenced giving them "cob feed." Neither do they re quire salt in its natural state. He has also ground seys eral bushels of cobs, and finds the meal an excellent article for making "mush." The most economical mode, however, of appropriating corn cobs, is to grind them with the corn. The corn should be first "crushed," in a mill constructed expressly for the purpose, and then ground into meal, the same as corn, when shelled .- Maine Cultivator.

Voctrn.

From the Dublin University Magizine THE EMBROIDERESS AT MIDNIGHT. She plies her needle till the lamp Is waxing pale and dim; She heres the watchman's heavy tramp, And she must watch 'ike him. Her hands are dry, her forehend damp, Her dark eyes faintly swim.

Look on her work-her blossom flowers, The lily and the rose,-Bright as the gem of sammer hours, But not to die like those; HERE, fadeless as in Eden's bowers, For ever they repose.

Once, maiden, thou wert fresh and fair, As those sweet flowers of thine; Now, shut from sunny light and air, How cans! thou choose but pine! Neglected flows thy raven hair, Like the uncultured vine.

Look on her work!-no common mind Arranged that glowing group-Wild wreaths the stately roses bind, Sweet bells above them droop-Ye almost sEE the sportive wind larting the graceful group!

Look on her work!-but look the more On her unwearied heart; And put aside the chamber door That doth the daughter part From that dear mother who before Taught her this cunning art,

She sleeps-that mother sick and pale-She sleeps-and little dreams That she, who does her features veil All day, in flitting gleams Of anxious hope, this hour doth hail, But not for happy dreams ..

God bless her in her lone employ, And fall those earnest eyes With visions of the coming joy, Waiting her sacrifice; When they who give her this employ, Pay her its stinted price!

Think how her trembling hand will clasp, The treasures it will hold, With that which seems a greedy grasp-Yet not for love of gold; That love-that sigh's relieving gasp, Its deeper springs unfold.

Think how her hasty feet will roam The market and the street, To purchase for her humble home The food and clothing meet, And with what gladness she will come Back to this poor retreat!

Poor maiden! if the fair ones who Thy graceful 'brodiery buy. Only one half thy struggles knew. And filial piety. Methinks some drop of pity's dew Would gem the proudest eye!

It is not here its full reward Thy gentle heart will prove! Here ever must thy lot be hard,-But there is ONE above Who sees and will not disregard Thy consecrated love.

They may be destroyed by the well known fruitin our country, was William Coxe, of Burlington, in the roots; but when the soil is clayey and the weather circular brush, invented by the late Col. Pickering. We New Jersey, who had in his orchard some thirty years damp or wet at planting time, it gets into a state of since upward of one hundred sorts; many of these trees are now in a thrifty state, particularly those that were engrafted upon suckers. We have for some time been convinced that suckers make good stocks; and the above in relation to Coxe's Orchards of the Apple, (as we were informed during a recent visit to Burlington) seems to coroborate this. The roots of suckers are more inclined to take a horizontal direction than seedling, which are apt to extend downwards into a cold sub-soil. Leibig's, the great Agricultural chemist, leading principle is, that the carbon of plants is chiefly derived from the atmosphere; which suggest the importance of admitting air to the roots of plants, by inviting them to the surface. The supply of suckers, however, is so limited, as at least one half of those taken from around trees, have not sufficient roots, and many or them crooked stems, we must propagate from seed; usually obtained from the pomace of the cider mill. and free from weeds. In the spring of the second season, as early as the weather will admit, we select the largest of one year's growth, take them up, shorten their tap-roots, and then plant them out in nursery rows, one foot apart, and three feet between the rows. The following autumn, we generally bud all these within three inches of the groud. This is usually done in September, and generally succeeds best when performed in cloudy weather, or in the morning or evening; for the great power of the mid-day sun is apt to dry an shrink the cuttings and buds.

Budding. In selecting buds they should be taken from well ripened shoots, and not from immature ones that frequently start from, and near the centre of the tree. Cut off the unrine bads upon the extreme, end o the shoot, leaving only those that are smooth and well developed; and also the leaves, leaving about one half of the leaf stem, for the convenience of inserting the buds. Then take strands of bass or Russia matting, soaked in water to render it pliable; make an upright inches long, and at the top of this, a cross cut which will form a T; take off a bud from your scion with a portree with a smooth piece of bone, ivery or hard wood between our nursery rows of young fruit trees. inserting the bud, and then tie the strip of matting firmly across the top and bottem of the bud. In about three, weeks after these are budded you will see whether they are taken by their plampness. Side shoots not to be removed. With young trees it has been the practice of some, to trim off the laterals or side shoots, which causes the trees to make a slender and weeping top; these shoots should not pe taken off while the trees are young and thrifty; the trunk will not grow so fast in circumference by divesting them of their leaves or side branches.

Preparation of Land. In the preparation of land for raising seedling fruit trees, we have found that by following nature in her mode of enriching soil by those of vegetable substances, such as muck, peat-earth, leafmould and ashes, to be the best dressing for the growth of fruit trees. These we should recomend to be composted with barn-yard manure; hog manure unless well decomposed, we consider as deletrious to fruit trees; air slacked lime on the generality of our soils is beneficial, particularly for the pear tree. Mulching, (so called) which is done by placing coarse manure or litter arround a tree, will preserve the moisture, and is much better practice than surface waterings.

Soil &c., for an Orchard. The soil best adapted for an apple orchard, as well as the aspect for the trees is not so easy to determine as we cannot set down rules that will not meet with exceptions; but of this we feel confident, that deep rich soil in sheltered situations are in drills in well pulverized soil; keeping the surface loose not as some suppose the most proper for the apple; for we find that this tree succeeds well in shallow loam, the young wood is always of more moderate growth, and better ripened, than when their roots strike deep into the the ground.

Position of an Orchard. The situation of an orchard should neither be in the bottom of a narrow valley, not on the top of an exposed hill; in the first, the bearing wood is rarely so well ripened, and in the second, they are too much exposed to winds; the most desirable site, tion of their saving them the ashes, and there are others children and my mother besides. It is not well to raise a crop probably the least injurious in a young or newly set orchard; white beans we find the least exhausting to raise

Pruning In pruning the apple tree we have found the spring the most favorable, soon after the swelling of the buds, the sap then being in motion, the wounds soon heal over; if this is done in the fall or winter months, the trees are apt to crack or canker. THE CHAMBER OF THE DEAD,

IN THE FRANKFORT CEMETERY.

Much has been said of this cemetery, in connexion with precipitate interments. So much has been said about it, that even the French Minister, who is not easily moved, has sent thither an agent, charged with making an investigation into the matter. They give the name of the Chamber of the Dead, in the Cemetery of Frankfort, to a range of buildings, which in six cells. consecrated to the dead, are arranged around a small hall, occupied by a watcher. They leave the dead in their winding-sheets, and place them on an iron frame.-

Above, attached to slender threads, hang ten copper thimbles They meet into these thimbles the thumbs and fingers of each hand of the corpse. The threads are each connected with a small bell in the chamber of rection which the watcher cannot fail to hear. The watcher is not ever allowed to sleep during the night, and in order to be sure that he religously keeps his strike, the watcher must press on the face of that clock a needle or indicis, like that which the drivers of Parisian omnibusses press every time a traveller enters their carriage. This needle obedient to a secret mechanism, cannot be moved, after the hour has struck, or before the exact moment; the watcher with care for this moment. must thus keep himself in a state of constant vigilance. Each of these cells is warmed by a small furnace and ventilated from above where are four small windows opening to the four cardinal points. The salubrity of he air is kept up by a small stream of chlorined water, constantly flowing under the coffin. A thermometer indicates where the temperature of the cell is maintained at a proper elevation. If the person be only in a lethergy, and awakens, he is transported into an apartment where every thing is arranged to receive him; there is a good bed, a bathing-tub, warm clothes, pharmacopoia, and a physician. The Chamber of the Dead is for the sake of poor persons, and for strangers who die here apart from their family. For the rich these precautions are useless; for, among these classes, it is not required that the dead shall be kent in their houses until decomposition has taken place-the only certain guarantee of the reality of death. In this way the dead are kept three, five, and even seven or eight

But among the poor, who often have only one room for a whole family, the dead cannot thus be kept .-They are therefore immediately transported to these rooms. The same is done to strangers, not only because they cannot require, without great inconvenience, the keeping of a corpse in a furnished hotel, but also because no person being interested in the dead, they would be but poorly watched, and it might escape notice if there were signs of life which the most prompt and inlightened attentions can render durable,

OUR RAILROAD PROSPECTS.

We are gratified to learn that our citizens are joining with one accord in support of the petition of T. P. Pingree and als., for additional railroad accommodations Let the prayer of this petition be granted in a mestering direction, and let the Essex road be completed in : northerly direction, and then the summit of our hopes from railroads will be attained. Fifteen miles of nev road built by Pingree and als., will open a complete an direct communication between Salem and Lowell, an also between Salem and Boston, free of ferry inchm brances. This is what the citizens of Danvers hav been praying for, for fifteen long years, and all the have as yet realized is the generous accommodata afforded up the valley of the North River, by the East ern Railroad. To be sure, since the Legislative bet began to toll. we have a decent car, moving at regula hours, and probably shall have while this august bod is in session -- then probably to be suspended to give way to the dirt cars for filling the docks of Salem .-Why Danvers, which is quite as near to Boston as Salem is, should forever be compelled to move two miles a siw ardly, before the cars begin to start towards Bosten, which is situate in a south-westerly direction, it is Eastern Railroad, or any body else, to build us a railroad to Boston; all we ask, is the privilege of building one for ourselves, in a manner which shall not interfere with the chartered rights of others; and we cannot should not be granted.

CULTIVATION OF THE APPLE. We have copied Essex Agricultural Society, for 1847, an Essay, on the labor and time of the Agents, and for other indespenscultivation of the Apple, from the pen of J. M. FOR THE COURIER.

MR. EDITOR, In Tuesday's Gazette, of this week, s an article on Railroads, under the signature of "North Danvers." Notwithstanding its village pretensions, its deep water characteristics show its city origin. The writer has put forward many axioms that no one will question; but the whole tenor of that and former comnunications to the public, from the same source, show that he too has "an axe to grind," and that he wants to bring his deep water privileges to a favorable market. Can any man in his senses for a moment believe, that real friend of the Essex Railroad would be in fayor of another and independent railroad to the interior country? Complete that road as begun, and it will do all the country business necessary to be done, for twenty years to come. A land avenne into Boston is necessary and will unquestionably be granted at the present session of the Legislature.

In the city of Salem, the Rev. Mr. Carlton was employed 41 days, during which time he visited 2788 families. The whole number of Protestant families, found entirely destitute of the Scriptures, was thirty-five; those having but parts, or worn-out copies so as to be almost useless, were fifty-six: 1036 bibles and testaments were sold, at the low prices of the American Bible Society, viz: $306,33; and 213 were given gratuitously, at the cost off $73.06.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the hab it of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla.

The Most Extraordinary Medicine in the World! HIS Extract is put up in quart bottles; it is six. times cheaper, pleasanter, and warranted su-perior to any sold. It cures diseases without vom-iting, purging sickening, or debilitating the patient: The great beauty and superiority of this Sarsaparilla over all other medicine is, while it eradicates disease, it invigorates the body. It is one of the very best Spring and Summer medicines ever known: it not only purifies the whole system and strengthens the person, but it creates new, pure and rich blood—a power possessed by no other medicine. And in this lies the grand secret of its wonderful success. Whas performed within the past two years, more than 25,000 cures of severe cases of disease; at least 1000 of these were considered ncurable. More than 3000 cases of Chronic Rheumatism;

2000 cases of Dyspepsia; 4000 cases of General Debility and Want of Energy; 7000 cases of the different Female complaints; 2000 cases of Scrofula;

1500 cases of Liver complaint; 2500 cases of Disease of the Kidneys and Dropsy;

8000 cases of Consumption;
And thousands of cases of all diseases of the blood, viz:—Uicers, Erysipelas, Salt Rueum, Pimples on the face, &c.—Together with numerous cases of Sick Headache, Pain in the Slde and Chest, Spinal affections, de.

This, we are aware must appear incredible; but we have letters from physicians and our agents from all and every part of the United States, informing as of extraordinary cures. R Van Buskirk, Esq., one of the most respectable Druggists in Newark, N. J., informs me that he can refer to more than 150 cases in that place alone. There are thousands of cases in the city of New York which we will refer to with pleasure, and to men of character. It is the best medicine for the prevention of di-ease known. It has undoubtedly saved the lives of more than 5000 CHIL BREN THE PAST SEASON,

> GREAT FEMALE MEDICINE. Dr Townsend's Sarsaparilla is a sovereign and speedy cure for the incipient Consumption, Barrenness Leucorrhæa, or Whites, obstructed or insuffic-ient Menstruction, Incontinence of urine or involuntary decharge thereof, and for the general prostrain herent cause or causes, produced by irregularity illness or accident. Nothing can be more surpris ing than its invigorating effects on the human frame from its influence. It immediately counteracts the nervelessness of the female trame, which is the great cause of barrenness.

Opinions of Physicians.

Dr. Townsend is almost duly receiving orders from physicians in different parts of the union.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned, Physicians of the city of Albany, have in numerous cases prescribed Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, and believe to be one of the most valuable preparations in the market. Signell-H. P. Puling, M. D., J. Wilson, M. D.

For once we covet the gift of eloquence that we might gather the Working Men of New England, in idea of the great object for which the benevolent Author | with the other shaking me by the right arm, saying, to be held in this city, on the third Wednesday of this New Year. They should come in bannered hosts and glittering trains, bearing the insignia of Justice. They should come, not with fierce oath, lance and spear, nor death-booming cannon, but with words of helpful cheer; with hoe and spade, fore-plane and trowel, up to the founding of the Temple of Industry. Never since our movement began, was there more need of such a meeting of the Working Men than now; and never was occasion more auspicious. In some form or other, the question of labor has become supreme among all classes, and in all civilized countries, pervading their legislation, their literature, their social ethics, to an unprecedented extent. It is a question and more to public attention, whether it be of famine, pestilence, war, mercantile revolutions, the decline of wages, the increase of pauperism, and popular ignorance on the one hand, or on the other the d scoveries of science, the development of a general spirit of philanthropy and co-operation, and the rapid extension of facili ties for friendly intercourse among all communities and nations; these all show that certain measures are necessary, for which instead, no amount of quibbling about taville, sub-treasuries, regulations of currency place laborers and capitalists in conciliatory relations,

> MEXICAN METHOD OF CHURNING. The Mexicans, it is said, have a curious method of churning their milk. The following, which we find in an old number of the Albany Cultivator, descriptive of the process, we re-publish for the gratification of the curious. It may be authentic :-

"Many patents have been granted for various kinds of churns in our Yankee land, which probably in most cases originated from those who were accustomed to the 'good old way," but it strikes me that the Mexican churn beats all your Yankee invent ons for ease. pleasure and saving of time. The method, as communicated to me by Joseph Greenham, a merchant of Vera Cruz, is: to enclose two tin cans in a green cow-hide, the size of them to correspond to the quantity of milk: the hide will shrink on drying and adhere tight to the cans, and being placed one on each side of a trottingborse, it has the appearance of saddle-bags. When filled nearly full with milk, the Mexican has only to mount, the steed and ride into town from Medling to Vera Cruz the distance eight miles; the motion of the horse effects the separation of the butter from the milk, and the rider has only to pocket the cash for his buttermilk and but-

known: it not only purifies the whole system and strengthens the person, but it creates new, pure and rich blood—a power possessed by no other medcine. And in this lies the grand secret of its wonderful success. It has performed within the past two years, more than 25,000 cures of severe cases of disease; at least 1000 of these were considered incurable. More than 3000 cases of Chronic Rheumatism;

2000 cases of Dyspepsia; 4000 cases of General Debility and Want of Energy; 7000 cases of the different Female complaints; 2000 cases of Scrofula; 1500 cases of Liver complaint;

viz:—Ulcers, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Pimples on the face, &c.—Together with numerous cases of Sick Headache, Pain in the Slde und Chest, Spinal affections, &c.

This, we are aware must appear incredible; but we have letters from physicians and our agents from all and every part of the United States, informing as of extraordinary cures. R Van Buskirk, Esq., one of the most respectable Druggists in Newark N. J., informs me that he can refer to more than 150 cases in that place alone. There are thousinds of cases in the city of New York which we will refer to with pleasure, and to men of character. It s the best medicine for the prevention of disease nown. It has undoubtedly saved the lives of more han 5000 CHILDREN THE PAST SEASON, as it removed the cause of disease.

UNITED STATES OFFICER. Capt. J. W. McLean, of the U.S. Navy, has kindly ent us the following certificate. It tells its own story, Rahway, Jan 2, 1847 A year since I was taken the Influenza, and my whole sys em left in a debilitated state. I was inluced to try Dr Townsend's Sarsaparilla, and after aking twe or three bottles I was very much releved, and ttribute it entirely to the said Sarsaparella. I have continued taking it and find that I improve every day. I believe that it saved my life and would not be without it under any consideration.

SCRCFULA CURED. This Certificate conclusively proves that this Sirsaparilla has perfect control over the most obstinate liseases of the blood. Three persons cured in one louse is unprecedented.

THREE CHILDREN Dr Townsend, Dear Sir-I have the pleasare to inform you that three of my children have been cured of the Sorofula, by the use of your excellent meded of the Serciula, by the use of your excellent med-cine. They were severely afflicted with very bad sores; have jaken some four bottles;—it took them away—for which I feel myself under deep obliga-tions.

For seats apply at Ham's Hotel, et William Fostions, which for the comfort and convenince of the continuance there is a state of tife. This period may be delayed for several years by using this medicine. Nor is it less valuable to those who are approaching womenhood, as it is calculated to asset proaching womanhood, as it is calculated to assist her nature by quickening the blood and invigorating the system. Iudeed this medicine is invaluable for all the delicate diseases to which women are highly of the beneficial results of the use of this nedicine, in cases of indigestion and jaundice. RHEUMATISM. This Sarsaparilla is used with the most perfect success in Rheumatic complaints, however severe or chrenic, The astonishing cures it has performed are indeed wonderful. Other remedies sometimes. give temporary relief, this entirely eradicates a from the system, even when the limbs and bones are dreadfully swollen. PILES. PILES. PILES.

GREAT FEMALE MEDICINE. Dr Townsend's Sarsaparilla is a sovereign and speedy cure for the incipient Consumption, Barrenness Leucorrhea, or Whites, obstructed or insufficient Menstruation, Incontinence of urine or involuntary discharge thereof, and for the general prostration of the system-no matter whether the result of n herent cause or causes, produced by irregularity ilness or accident. Nothing can be more surprising than its invigorating effects on the human frame Persons subject to weaknesss and lassitude from taking it, at once become robust and full of energy from its influence. It immediately counteracts the nervelessness of the female frame, which is the reat cause of barrenness. Opinions of Physicians.

Dr Townsend's Sarsaparilln is no less successfuin curing this distressing complaint, than for diseasl es of the blood, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and Nervous Debility. Read the following.

Dr Townsend, Dear Sir—The effects of your Sarsaparilla are tryly wonderful. For the last six or eight years I have been subject to severe attacks of the piles, during which I have suffered all the tortures of that distressing complaint, and had deviational of the state o spaired of ever finding relief except in death. I have the pleasure to inform you there is yet a balm in Gilead. I have used two bottles of your Sarsaparilla, and feel no remains of my old complaint. I send you this for publication, and any person you may refer to me, I would be happy to inform of the benefits I have received at your hands.

Let it mind the young and gay Of the sad and sighing, Setting by the lonely bed Where the sick are dying; Where the feeble lamp of life Momently grows dimmer, Til. in everlasting night, Dies its latest glimmer.

Let it reach the battle field, Where the swords are fl shing; Where, along the serried ranks, Cannon balls go crashing; Where among the heaps of slain, Looking upward sadly, O'er the carnage-recking plain Leaps the war-horse madly.

Grieve not though ye see no fruits Of your patient toiling; Though your feeble voice seem lost In the world as turnoiling-For the God whose holy faith Ye so fondly cherish, Will not that the seed ye sow, In his name, should perish.

When you lie within your graves Of the world unknowing, And above your coffined forms, Flowers and grass are growing-Men shall feel and own the power Of the truth you've spoken, And of love, unknown before, It shall be the token.

Then shall gladness come again To the sorrow-laden; Then shall kindness cheer the heart Of the fallen maiden; Then shall plenty bless the homes Want had made so lonely, And the slave, the slave no more, Serve his Maker only.

Then shall she, the angel bright, White winged Peace, descending, Tell of war, and bloody fight, Strife and slaughter's ending; Then-requital of your zeal And your firm endeavor-Folding up her pinions fair, Dwell with men forever.

CHILDREN.

We are certainly no advocate for harshness or cruely to children; but what are harshness and cruelty? Not letting them have their own way on all occasions ! not exercising needful restraint. A child is an important thing, assuredly; it is one day to be a man woman: we take great care to make it one or the other. We submit, however, that it is not quite so important as secondary to the whim or pleasure of the suckling.

IRELAND AND THE FAMINE.—An article is going the rounds of the American pipers stating, in effect, that the London Morning Advertiser draws attention to the remarkable fact that, during the scarcity of potatoes, the Irish exported more food than would have supplied any four countries in Europe. RECALL OF GENERAL SCOTT.

The report comes to us from so many quarers, that the President has determined to refree and independent republic, and that laws exist which call General Scott from Mexico, that we can hardly doubt its accuracy. The report by telegraph, on Thursday morning, from the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, II. to Mary Elizabeth, daughter of the late Henry Oswas to effect that an order has been sent for was to effect that an order has been sent for good, Esq., of Bultimore. Mr H my Barrett to Miss Gen. Worth's release from arrest, and that he Lacy T. G. Steams, both of Malden. is to take the command of the army in Mexico, with the rank of Major General.

The New York Tribune suggests that the administration design to have a political loco foco chief in Mexico, to whom they may conidentially impart their political designs; for the hard battles have been fought and won. and the country conquered; now the work of pillage, peculation and plunder is to be commenced. Hence the necessity of a political favorite."

Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla.

The Most Extraordinary Medicine in the World! times cheaper, pleasanter, and warranted superior to any sold. It cures diseases without vomiting, purging sickening, or debilitating the patient: The great beauty and superiority of this parilla over all other medicine is, while it eradi-cates disease, it invigorates the body. It is one of the very best Spring and Summer medicines ever known: it not only purifies the whole system and strengthens the person, but it creates new, pure and rich blood-a power possessed by no other medicine. And in this lies the grand secret of its won-derful success. It has performed within the past two years, more than 25,000 cures of severe cases of disease; at least 1000 of these were considered incurable. More than 3000 cases of Chronic Rheumatism; 2000 cases of Dyspepsia; 4000 cases of General Debility and Want of Energy; 7000 cases of the different Female complaints;

[From the Span sh of Juan Ruiz de Hatta.] A LITTLE WOMAN.

In a little precious stone, what splendor meets the eyes; In a little lump of sugar, how much of sweetness lies; So in a little woman, love grows and multiplies-You recollect the proverb says, 'A word unto the wise.

A peppercorn is very small, but seasons every dinner More than all other condiments, although 'tis sprinkled

Just so a little woman is, if love will let you win her;

And as within the little rose you'll find the richest dyes, And in a little grain of gold much price and value hes; As from a little balsam much rich odor doth arise, So in a little woman there's a taste of paradise.

The skylark and the nightingale, though small and light Yet warble sweeter in the grove than all the birds that sing; And so a little woman, though a very little thing, in spring.

FLOWERS AT THE GRAVE

BY GEORGE W. DEWEY.

Oh! come to the Grave the grave of the young, Where garlands in winter by fond hands are bung, Where Love Feeps his vigil, tho' chilly his breath Kissing those flowers which fade but in death, And witness the love, the young leave to earth-The sad vacant home, that welcom'd their birth; And such not for honor-glory or fame, When tributes like these the innocent claim.

Oh: come to the Grave, The grave of the Young . -Where wreathlets of love By fond hearts are hung.

The laurel may wreathe the proud victor's brow. But blood stains the spot where fallen foes bow, Hearts may exult at the tomb of the brave, But sweetest emotions arise at the grave Where, flowers in winter, tell the fond love, Which springing from earth, ascendeth above? The unwritten life to Eternity given, Ending on Earth but enduring in Heaven.

Then come to the Grave. The grave of the Young, Where wreathlets of love, ' By fond hearts are hung.

Read ye the lesson, no sacrifice here, "lis the Language of love-affection's warm tear, Welling forth grief from the fount of the heart, Where love liveth ever, unwilling to part Frem that Idol of Home-more levely now, With truth's diadem o'er-arching its brow-Than all those charms of a ripening age, Which our earnest watchfulness ever engage.

Oh! come to the Grave, The grave of the Young-Where love leaveth flowers, The cold Tombs among.

Well, it is certainly very mysterious!' said Mrs. Smith.

"Very mysterious, indeed!" said Mrs. Brown. 'Altogether beyond my comprehension!' said Mrs. Willowbougb.

'Not a word! how remarkable!' 'And whose name no one can discover!' continued Miss Willowbough.

But what is the peculiar mystery about him?

She had worked up every character within her reach. With the intuition of genius, she had seized upon every incident susceptible of expansion, and had thing that could have been done; but, alas! who can make bricks without straw?' Her best exertions met with no encouragement. Nothing would happen out of the regular course of events. Every body went to church on Sundays. Nobody was getting married, or liked to be, poor woman; she felt sure of that. In fact there was nothing worthy the attention of Miss Vinegar, and the people began to fear that, for want of any other, she would attack her own character. Never did anything occur in better time than the appearance of the

'Nothing easier than reducing the size of the waist,' answered Miss Vinegar, sharply, and glancing at Miss Willowbough's hour-glass form.

Really the conservation was becoming quite personal. So at least thought Miss Willowbough as she answered, But there is one thing he could not alter. "Every American artist that comes here sends home a dozen or two of portraits of the beggars in the charthe maid picked up the letter, Mrs. Smith received it ac er of Apostles, or Virgin Marys. A sturdy old fellow, who blacks my hoo's, tells me that he has been painted twenty-eight times in the character of Saint Paul, thirteen times as Joseph, nine times as Saint Peter-he cannot remember how many times as the "Roman Father," and as the "Head of an Old Man" at least a thousane times. One would think that from assuming these characters so often, he would have attained to uncommon sanctity, but he is, in truth the

PUNISHMENT OF IDLE HUSBANDS.

The head chief (of New Zealand) often interferes n minor matters of a domestic nature; for instance, if a lazy fellow has a wife or two and a few children, and through love for fishing, dancing, and loitering idly about, neglects to bring in the necessary support for his family, a complaint is made; the chief visits the house in person, and if he sees just grounds for punishment, he orders out the whole population of the village -men women and children arm themselves with a stiff birch made of small caues; they then form a long double line about six feet apart, and wait with anxious glee the approach of the delinquent. At last he is placed at the end of the lines, amidst yel's, jibes, etc. The word is given by the chief, and away he darts at his utmost speed through the ranks, every one endeavoring to hit him as he passes. According to his deserts, he may get off with running the line once or may have to do so twice or thrice; but he is skilled in cunning and fleetness that can run the lines even once, without having his skin tickled for him, by the hearty application of the birch, wielded by some strong woman! As the punishment is not of a fatal kind, the whole affair creates prestricted merriment.

Unlike many other trees, it is found on almost every variety of soil; sometimes in swamps, on the side of rocky hills, and mixed with the birch and maples in the uplant woods. It very readily propagates uself, and is more rapid in its growth than the spruces .-There always have been tanuers amongst us, who have entertained apprehensions that the supply of hemlock bark would, in a few years, fail. We well remember in the days of our apprentic ship, that the shipper of a Esennebec sloop, came into our tanyard and informed us and the bark down east was about all gone; and we, in our simplicity, should have believed that the days of cor servi ade were drawing to a close, had not our old barman, leaning his breast upon his bark shovel, and foolding the down easter full in the eye, and by a comical screw of the face, in a way peculiar to him when he put on his knowing look, said that the same story about the scarcity of bark had been told him from his boyhood, but he guessed there would be about as much bark, as there was money to pay for it. This we have generally found to be true, from that day to the present time, although we sometimes fail to get a full supply, Est is the case with some of us the present year, in conrequence of a neglect to peel it in its senson. Still, as 20 have before said, the hemlock is yet found in abundance in the forest, and probably its ultimate failure will at a very remote period. The hemlock is not found in England-consequently it was unknown to our forefathers. It was regarded by some of the early writers er the country as a most worthless tree, being totally audit for any useful purpose, and they deeply regretted that it so abounded in the colonies. And fifty or more years ago, Michaux considered the hemlock as "offering no inducement to propagate it in Europe." It was named by our foreinthers the Hemlock Spruce. It recoived its first appellation -hemlock, from the habit of the tree, in some localities, in growing near each other, and their branches hemming and locking together. Its second appellation-spruce, was given it because it was found to belong to the same genus with the white and black spruce, although it does not possess a striking family likeness. The spruces are in their forms erect and epicy; whereas the hemlock rises with an uniform shaft and forms a round head. The value of the hemlock, when used as timber, or cawed into boards, plank, joist, laths, &c., is becoming every year of more importance as a substitute for the white pine, which is growing every year more scarce. The great fault of hemlock fumber is, that when sawed from old trees, it is frequently found to be chaky. For fuel, it is in considerable repute, but the wood being filled with air cells, it snaps badly; but when burned in furnaces, brick kilns, ovens and close stoves, this inconvenience is not experienced. The hemlock is worthy of cultivation for its beauty, and to do it successfully, it requires shelter from high winds, and to be grown together in clusters for mutual prosection. The hemlock has been successfully used to make garden hedges; it bears clipping well, and forms a beautiful evergreen barrier. We cannot tell when the hemlock bark first began to be used in this country, in the tanning of leather. Our forefathers received for mother country; but these supplies frequently failing them, they were induced to tan their own sole leather for the mending of their family shoes. The vat was a large trough, made from a pine log, kept above ground in summer, and in their cellars in the winter. The hides were cut into strips of a suitable width for the bottom of their shoes, and layers of oak bark reduced to a coarse powder, by pounding it with a mallst or axe put between them. Lime being scarce, ashes was frequently used to take off the hair. From such small begunnings in the art of tanning, has arisen a business of immense importance. It would be interesting, had we the means of doing it, to trace the rise and progress of tanning, from the days of the hospitable Simon, who eutertained the ardent Peter at his house, by the sea side in Joppa, to the present time; or even to trace the increase of the tanning business during the period of this by the Commissioners. country's history.

Now, Mr. Editor, in view of all the pecuniary benefits this town has received from this tree, who amongst us would not exclaim with me, "of all the trees in the forest, give me the hemlock."

TO lose one's hair prematurely, is a great misfortune a cause of affliction; and it is only then that we are fully impressed with the idea, that to create is grand and beautiful; but to stop decay in the midst of its career,— to preserve what is beautiful, in spite of years,—is cer-tainly great and beneficent,—and this is the prodigy which art, aided by experience, has succeeded in effectwhich art, aided by experience, has succeeded in effecting. The Hair Restorative bears the remedy to those physical calamities,—stop the falling off of the hair, promotes its growth, viviles the roots and the skin, and produces it with a pour vivon.

The East Lustral has gone through its first experiments, and its success is a problem that has been solved, This extraordinary discovery has fully sustained the reputation it has not with, by its increasing popularity. This extraordinary discovery has fully sustained the representation it has met with, by its increasing p-pularity.

A GREAT BARGAIN! REMEMBER GEORGE W. SIMMONS'S "OAK HALL," ANN STEEET. BOSTON. (OPPOSITE THE HEAD OF MERCHANTS ROW.]
B()STON, Jan 1 1m WILLIAM D. NORTHEND, Attorney and Counsellor at Law. ce in ALLEN'S BUILDING, over the WARREN BANK MECHANICAL AND DENTAL SURGERY.

Mineral Teeth, with False Jaw and Gnms, of a Quality and Price that will meet the reasonable wishes of all—Springs entirely dispensed with—Suetion Plates used, that will resist a weight of 16lbs. wishes of all—Springs entirely dispensed with—Suetion Plates used, that will resist a weight of 161bs.

IN preparing artificial teeth for all sorts of mouths, a thousand difficulties arise, that but few are qualified to overcome. This is especially the case with whole and half sets. It is not only necessary that the plates on which the teeth are mounted have a perfect and easy fit, with a suction sufficiently powerful to confine them to the jaw, without those roublesome appendages so commonly worn, the spiral springs; but the exact proportions of all the teeth and gums to be inserted, must correspond in every particular with those given us by nature: and to accomplish this in the ordinary way is wholly impossible. As no definite rule can be laid down for the guidance of the manufacturer, of course, much will depend on the experience, ingenuity, and correct tasts of the artist, in combining in the work all that is requisite for perfect substitute. By the loss of the natural teeth, the organs of speech are seriously affected, and will remain so, to a very considerable extent, until the restoration of the dental sounds. This cannot be effected without restoring to the mouth the exact and precise amount it has lost. If the substitute have more or less in amount, the speech will betray it—the cheeks and lips by their unnatural appearance will declare it, and mastication would be awkward in the extreme. If the teeth have been removed by disease, and much of the dental ridge and jaw by absorption, science must seek ont a remedy, and art must apply it. This has been su cessiully done—the great desideratum has been reached, and the subject is no longer invested with doubt and uncertainty. All that is requisite, is found in the exarce proportions of nature, with its life-like this titus and shades.

The correctness of this theory must be obvious to all who will give the subject a moment's consideration. It addresses itself to, and is in accordance with the dictates of common sense; and in no other way can a good set of t N preparing artificate teeth for all sorts of dences of a well-filled tooth, should be better understood by the community, so as to guard against imposition they are few in number, and may become familiar to all.

To all other branches of Mechanical and Dental Surgery, such as setting teeth on gold pivots, cleansing and polishing, extracting without pain, killing nerves by the use of his celebrated anodyne, regulating, &c. &c., the subscriber gives his undivided attention. From the rare opportunities the subscriber has had for a thorough knowledge of his profession, both in theory and practice—being the result of years of study, research, and great experience with a wide-spread practice, extending to almost every town in New England, and every State in the Union—the Public may rest assured that what he undertakes to perform will be well done.

Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla.

The Most Extraordinary Medicine in the World!

MHIS Extract is put up in quart bottles; it is six.

times cheaper, pleasanter, and warranged The great beauty and superiority of this Sarsaparilla over all other medicine is, while it eradi-cates disease, it invigorates the body. It is one of he very best Spring and Summer medicines ever known: it not only purifies the whole system and strengthens the person, but it creates new, pure and rich blood-a power possessed by no other medicine. And in this lies the grand secret of its wonderful success. It has performed within the past two years, more than 25,000 cures of severe cases of discuse; at least 1000 of these were considered incurable. More than 3000 cases of Chronic Rheumatism;

2000 cases of Dyspepsia; 4000 cases of General Debility and Want of Energy; 7000 cases of the different Female complaints;

2500 cases of Disease of the Kidneys and Dropsy; For Lynn, 7, 9, 11 1-2 A.M., 12 1-4, 2 1-2, 3 1-2, 5000 cases of Consumption;
And thousands of cases of all diseases of the blood,

Sick Headache, Pain in the Side and Chest, Spinal affections, de.

This, we are aware must appear incredible; but we have letters from physicians and our agents from all and every part of the United States, informing us of extraordinary cures R Van Buskirk, Esq., one of the most respectable Dinggists in Newark N. J., informs me that he can refer to more than 150 cases in that place alone. There are thousands of cases in the city of New York which we will refer to with pleasure, and to men of character. It is the best medicine for the prevention of disease known. It has undoubtedly saved the lives of more than 5000 CHILDREN THE PAST SEASON, as it removed the cause of disease.

Opinions of Physicians.

Dr. Townsend is almost duly receiving orders rom physicians in different parts of the union.

This is to certify that we, the undersigned, Physicians of the city of Albany, have in numerous cases prescribed Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla, and believe it to be one of the most valuable preparations in the market. Signell-H. P. Puling, M. D., J. Wilson, M. D.

Think of it, Harry! Three years absence; twelve months without a line or message ;- and now within a few paltry miles, condemned to watch the bubbles on the water for hour after hour, as they float by like so many snails; and hurriedly breaking from his companion, he resumed his rapid pace over the deck,

'Wings would not suit him in such a mood,' muttered the other, - nothing but the lightning for him, and then he would never feel how hot it was.'

Evening came creeping over the water with a stealup the Eastern hills .- until no light remained but that of the moon, which threw upon the waters, trembling blades of silver, and painted upon the surface black distorted images of the bold heights which towered almost above the vessel already entering within the range of the H ghlands.

The two friends leaned over the side in silence, as the sloop dipped into the dark mountain shadows, like a hare seeking a covert, and anou, as if assured of safety, shot out into the pure moonlight, joyfully clapping her white wings as the breezes freshened.

'What a glorious night!' said Harry ; 'just such an one as that after your wedding, Fred, when you must up under the rocks on Constitutional Island. With the romantic strand you had promised, which proved to be a slippery rock about four feet high and fifty yards of man before, they had their fill of it then, when the tide rose and Cranger made the important discovery that the bottom plank was out. Do you recollect the old skipper that took us off? How he edged away when he saw your Lucy's white dress, and thought her a spirit luring him to destruction, (the suspicious old wretch ;) but his taste for money soon quieted his scruples, when St. John at a venture pitched half a dollar into his crazy craft, and asked him if it felt het. How the heavy shadow of the island enshrouded us that night while all around was bathed in light, even to the white cascade that sparkled in the cove at the valley, and the glancing of the sentry's musket before the 'Yellow Barracks' on the plain.'

'Did you ever have a presentiment, Harry?' interranted the other .- the thought of some evil, impending and imminent? Did a cloud ever come over your brightest hour, like that little film which is just gliding over the moon :- and when that cloud came did it poison tha air you drew in, mingled like an infernal vapor with the sweetest draught, and sick ning your very soul, and all with no visible cause; but so immovably fixed in your mind that no resolution, no determination, could shake off the apprehension which tingled m every nerve, and drave its burning iron into your inmost heart? COLOR OF SNOW-ITS INHABITANTS. A vankee boy asked us the other day why snow is always white, and appeared to be much astonished when we told him that, although with us it was so, it did not in every country always appear white. The white color of snow is undoubtedly owing to the arrangement of the particles of the vapor from which it is formed. A certain degree of cold is necessary to form it and the moisture, and vapor, has the minute particles of which it is formed thrown into just such a state, or very near it, whenever that particular temperature takes, place. It has been found that the color of bodies devery much, if not entirely, upon the arrangement of their particles by which they reflect this or that kind of rays of light. Some experiments of Brewster, of Edmgburgh, prove this. He took a piece of polished steel. and by beating it to different degrees of temperature, different colors are exhibited, and by making slight cuts on its surface, some of them straight and parallel to each other, some of them curved or waved, &c., he also was enabled to exhibit different colors in consequence of the light"being reflected at different angles, and of course different rays striking the eye. In regard to the color of snow, we believe that in our latitude it is always of a brilliant white color. But in higher latitudes it has been seen of a red color. This at first astonished Parry and his companions, who discovered it in the artic regions. After a close examination it was found that the red color was occasioned by a foreign substance mingled with it, and which, on further examnation, was found to be a very minute vegetable, somehing like some of the mosses or mould. Indeed, it night with propriety be said to be mouldy snow.

Capt. Parry observes that the arctic mountains, on which he observed the red snow, are about six hundred feet high, and extended eight miles in length. The depth to which the color penetrated has been variously stated by different observers. Some found that it decended many feet beneath the surface, while others never ascertained that it spread beyond one or two

The following concerning peace is from the Washington Union of Friday morning. It will be seen that instead of a prospect of peace, all the recent rumors of a negotiation, are without a foundation, and instead of a speedy termination of the present unrighteous contest, a demand is urged for more murderers. more blood, more money, and a tame acquiesence of all who now oppose the war, to all the extravagant, blundering, and wicked schemes of the President and his RUMORS OF PEACE.—Rumors of a peace—of treaty of peace-of a project of peace-are so rife today in the city and in the Capitol, that we think it our duty to state there is no official account to confirm these rumors. Mineral Teeth, with False Jaw and Gnms, of a Quality and Price that will meet the reasonable tion Plates used, that will resist a weight of 16lbs.

In preparing artifical teeth for all sorts of mouths, a thousand difficulties arise, that but few are qualitied to overcome. This is especially the case with whole and half sets. It is not only necessary that the plates on which the teeth are mounted have a perfect and casy fit, with a saction sufficiently powerful to confine them to the jaw, without those troublesome appendages so commonly worn, the spiral springs; but the exact proportions of all the teeth and gums to be inserted, must correspond in every particular with those given us by nature: and to accomplish this in the ordinary way is wholly impossible. As no definite rule can be laid down for the guidance of the manufacturer, of course, much will depend on the ex-As no definite rule can be laid down for the guidance of the manufacturer, of course, much will depend on the experience, ingenuity, and correct taste of the artist, in combining in the work all that is requisite for perfect substitute. By the loss of the natural teeth, the organs of speech are seriously affected, and will remain so, to a very considerable extent, and the restoration of the dental sounds. This cannot be effected without restoring to the mouth the exact and precise amount it has lost. If the substitute have more or less in amount, the speech will betray it,—the cheeks and lips by their unnatural appearance will declare it, and mostication would be awkward in the extreme. If the teeth have been removed by disease, and much of the dental ridge and jaw by absorption, science must seek out a remedy, and art must apply it. This has been su cessfully done—the great desideratum has been reached, and the subject is no longer invested with doubt and uncertainty. All that is requisite, is found in the CARVED work; where the artist may contend even with nature for the mastery. In this new style of work, the whole substitute, jaw, gums, and teeth, are wrought from an impersishable nineral exponential.

work; where the artistinay contend even with nature for the mastery. In this new style of work, the whole substitute, jaw, gunz, and teeth, are wrought from an imperishable mineral composition, with all the exact proportions of nature, with its life-like tints and shades.

The correctness of this theory must be obvious to all who will give the subject a moment's consideration. It addresses itself to, and is in accordance with, the dictates of common sense; and in no other way can a good set of teeth be got up, that will give entire satisfaction. There are many other advantages in this mode of preparing and setting artificial teeth, that can only be understood and appreciated by an examination of specimens that may be seen at the subscriber's office. They consist of whole and half sets, and a veriety of cases of smaller magnitude, where much difficity of execution is overcome.

In addition to the above, not less important to the community is that of filling teeth in a thorough and skilful manner. Probably not more than one dentist out of twenty-live, as we find them in city or country, is qualified for this part of his profession. In order to save a tooth by filling, it is important that the dental cavity be properly prepared to receive a plug, and then filled by a particular process, which is only known to but few; and if this be attended to in season, before the exposure of the nerve, there can be no possible doubt of its saving the tooth for life—unless it be constitutionally nhealthy. As there is so much inferior work in this branch of dentistry, palmed off by travelling dentists especially, it is important that the evidences of a well-filled tooth, should be better understood by the community, so as to guard against mposition they are few in number, and may become familiar to all,

If you want reference in Boston, you can have it to your satisfaction; and if you but glance at the high reputation of these medicines abroad, you will be pertively assured that Dr. S. has never failed in a single instance, to cure all cases of Goughs, Consumption, Dyspepsia, or Liver Complaint. Patients applying to Dr S. never run down with consumption. There is not an instance where he has failed to restore the patient to health never run down with consumption. There is not an instance where he has failed to rectore the patient to health with a faithful trial of his medicines, except in the has stages of the disease. He never fails to cure the Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, cases of Dropsy, Diabetes, Cancer, Scrofula, King's Evil, White Swelling, Tumors, Cancer of the breast and womb of almost every variety. Cancers and Tumors are often removed in one hour without cutting A to fevers they are not known to exist among his patries. He has never failed, he a single instance, to break up Fevers in the commencement. Cholera Morbus, Diarrhea, Dysentary, and Cholera Infantum; Cancer, green, yellow and slimy evacuations of every description, are cured immediately by his Cholera Morbus Cordial. It is also of the highest importance for babeswhile norising, as it regulates the bowels, cures the canker and removes the wind and cholic pans, produces rost, and quiets the system. No parent would think of doing without this remedy, if its merits could be realized. It often removes or checks these diseases in less than thirty munutes. The Divorce of Josephine.

BY REV. J. S. C. ABBOTT.

The next day after the public announcement to the imperial council of State, of the intended separation, the whole imperial family were assembled in the grand saloon of the Tuileries, for the legal consummation of the divorce. It was the 16th of December, 1810 .-Napoloon was there, in all his robes of State, yet careworn and wretched. With his arms folded across his ments in which he was involved. And stronge to say, breast, he leaned against a pillar, as motionless as a Josephine continued to cherish for him emotions of the insensible of the tragedy enacting around him, of which rejoice in the birth of his child. All her griefs were statue, uttering not a word to any one, and apparently the was the sple author, and eventually the most pitiable forgotten in seeing Napoleon happy. The emperor of

A side door opened, and Josephine po-sessing the fortitude of her mother, burst into tears with the utmost deference by all the ambassadors of though her heart would break. All immediately arose, The household of Josephine was one of imperial mag. upon the appearance of Josephine. She wore a simple dress of white muslin, unadorned by a single ornament. With that peculiar grace for which she was ever distiuguished, she moved slowly and silently to the seat prepared for her. Leaning her elbow upon the table, and supporting her pallid brow with her hand, she struggled to suppress the anguish of her soul as she listened to the reading of the act of separation. The voice of the reader was interrupted only by the convulsive sobbings tender love burst forth anew in the bosom of Josephine. of Hortense, who stood behind her mother's chair .-Eugene also stood beside his mother in that dreadfu hour, pale, and trembling like the aspen leaf. Josephine, sat with tears silently trickling down her cheeks, in the mute composure of despair. At the close of this painful duty, Josephine for a moment pressed her handkerchief to her weeping eyes-but instantly regaining her composure, arose, and with her voice of ineffable sweetness, in clear and distinct tones pronounced the oath of acceptance. Again she sat down and with a trembling hand took the pen and placed her signature to the deed which forever separated her from the object of her dearest affections, and from all her most cherished hopes. Scarcely had she laid down her pen, when Eugene dropped lifeless upon the floor; and he was borne to his chamber in a state of insensibility, as his mother and sister retired.

stude and speechlessness, till Napoleon's usual hour of retiring to rest had arrived. In silence and in wreichedness Napoleon had just placed himself in the bed from which he had ejected the wife of his youth, and his servant was waiting only to receive orders to retire, when suddenly the private door to his chamber opened and Josephine appeared, with swollen eyes and disheveled hair, and all the dishabille of unutterable agony .-With trembling stops she tottered into the room-up proached the bed, and then irresolutely stopped-and burst into an agony of tears. "Delicacy-a feeling as i she now had no right to be there-seemed at first to have arrested her progress; but forgetting everything in the fullness of her grief, she threw herself on the bed clasped her husband's neck, and sobbed as if her heart had been breaking. Napoleon also wept while he endeavored to console her, and they remained for some time locked in each others' arms, silently mingling their tears together." The attendant was dismissed. and for an hoar they remained together in their last private interview, and then Josephine parted forever from the husband she had so long, so fondly and so faithfully loved. As Josephine retired, the attendant ag in entered, and found Napoleon so buried in the bed clothes as to be invisible. And when he arose in th morning, his pale and haggard features gave attestation to the sufferings of a sleepless night.

At 11 o'clock the next morning, Josephine was to leave the scene of all her earthly greatness, and to depart from the Tuileries forever. "The whole household assembled on the stairs and in the vestibule, in order to obtain a last look of a mistress whom they had loved and who, to use an expression of one present, carried stantly entering a close parriage, with six horses, drove erty-but rapidly away, without casting one look backward on Pigmies are pigmies still, the perched on alps-

KNITTING.

This is an art that is far more modern than that or weaving. Plain weaving is just the intersecting of crossing a number of horizontal threads by others, each succeeding crossing threads passing over one horizonta thread, (warp) and under the other across the web .--Knitting on the other hand, makes a web with one thread alone, it answering for both warp and welt and the whole apparatus for this purpose carried about in a lady's pocket. Knitting is just the formation of a numb. r of loops or first a row of loops and then every succeeding row drawn through a former row. Four wires are generally used for this purpose, but it can also be done with one, of a hook shape to draw one loop through another. Guernsey frocks and mittens are made in this way. Knitting is said to have been invent ed in Scotland about the year 1500. If this is true it has soon spread nearly over the wide world. It is raated that a scottish gentleman had a servant who was famons for her fine knitting. At one time she knit a pair of hose of the most variegated and beautiful color and of such fine texture that each pair could be drawn through a gold ring. The gentleman, who was a loyalty to George the Fourth, by sending him one of the pairs of hose. It is also related that the girl who made them danced a hole in the heel of one of them at a ball the night before it was sent away and darned it so perfect. hat it was presented to the king who was graciously pleased with the present and often wore them afterwards, not without a sly wink from Jenny, as often as she heard them speak about the king's hose. In New England hand knitting is industriously practiced by on tidy farmer's daughters, in fact in all our good rural disricts, it is an essential quality of a good housewife, and should be, so should spinning and hand loom weaving .-Knitting is done extensively by machinery ai Cohoes, a thriving manufacturing village on the lower Falls of the Mohawk, near troy, N. A few days since the stove-pipe in his office got clogged up with soo: and other superfluous substances which prevented the free burning of the bi-tuminous and rather inclined to smoke more than was consonant to the feelings of the doctor or agreeable to tion, without taking it down and scattering the sooty substance all over his sofa, new carpet, books. *skulls and other appartenances. He at last determined to take advice upon the subject, and held a consultation with a friend over 'a dozen stewed,' as to what course of practice was to be pursued. His friend told him it rather easier than falling off a log, and could be done is quick as a flish. It was necessary only to take a little gunpowder, envelope it in a piece of paper, insert t in the stove-pipe and set fire to it. and by the explosive force of the gunpowper the soot would be disl and fall down into the las tioint, when it could be easily raked out with a poker. Our friend thought it a good dea and det rmi accordingly repaired to his office and sent out his black: boy for a quarter of a pound of gunpowder. As soon as the article was procured, he wrapped it up in a number of papers, pushed it into the stove-p pe, closed the door retreated to a remote corner of the room, awaiting with breathless impatience the explosion. He was not destined to remain long in suspense; a terrific explosion. was heard and soon all was in darkness; the stovepipe, which had more kinks in it than Jacob's ladder. was reft in a dozen pieces; the astral lamp upon the centre table was thrown down from the force of the concussion: the skull of 'Mary Brown, a celebrated courteannt, was e ected like a hollow shot into a corner, and grinned harably, as if in delight at the confusion; the black boy was stretched upon the ground shricking frantically; the coal was scattered about the floor, and began to burn pret y freely, and the learned doctor, panic stricken, rushed wildly to the door and requested some body to come in and help him out. The doctor is determined now if he ever has occasion to clean his pipe again to have it taken down by a less summary process. or if he does apply gunpowder to use it in infin doses upon hon expathic principles .- [N. ORIGIN OF VARIOUS THINGS.

In the twelfih and thirteenth centuries, good manners required that persons of different sexes, when invited to parties, should sit down in couples, and each couple should have one plate between them. In families, one goblet was deemed sufficient for all; and St. Betrand was disinherited by his father, who was afflicted with the laprosy, for having wiped the edge of the goblet before he drank.

Beds, now such indispensable pieces of furniture, vere to the Greeks and Romans articles of great lux ury. When they exchanged the leaves, and skins of. beasts, on which their heroic ancestors reposed, for mattrasses and feather beds, the bedsteads were made sometimes of ivory, sometimes of cedar, and someames of silver. It would be difficult, now-n-days. in the middle ranks of life, to find beds such as our ancestors slept on, not only with their wives and their children, but with their dogs and their friends. An invitation to such a couch was then considered the strongest proof of affection and confidence that could

Since your last, the hearing upon the several Petitions of T. P. Pingree, and als. Jos. S. Cabot, and als. and George Osborne, and als. have been continued, and yesterday afternoon the argument by Mr. Russell, in behalf of the Eastern Railroad against the prayer of the Petition of Pingree and Osborn, was heard. The game now playing is, to satisfy the Committee that the Eastern Railroad do now really inend to carry their Road into Boston, between the depots of the Boston and Maine, and the Boston and Lowell Roads; and this being lone, there will be no necessity of any other road to Boston. The Directors of the Eastern Road now admit, what the public have for a ong time asserted, that their road is mislocated and that the Ferry must be abandoned .-Whether this is a ma lovre for the present time, or whether it is a frank acknowledgement of error, will be made apparent, by the movements that are to follow. It is also of the highest importance for babeswhile nursing, as it regulates the bowels, cures the canker and removes the wind and cholic pains, produces rest, and quiets the system. No parent would think of doing without this remedy, if its merits could be realized. It often removes or checks these diseases in less than thirty minutes. THIS SYSTEM WILL NEVER FAIL TO RESTORE HEALTH in every curable disease. There are thousands who have been cureo by these vegetable medicines, and many of them after they were pronounced in curable and who have been cured by these vegetable menticines, and given up by some of the most eminent physicians and surgeons of the United States. Many can bare testimony to these facts, it having been but a short time before they were restord to their usual health and strength. [From the Portsmouth (N. H.) Gazette The New Hampshire Mystery.

The remarkable history we are about to relate occured within our recolections, and near a certain locality in New-Hampshire. The exciting event will be recognized and remembered. About two miles from a small town in the State we have mentioned, the road crosses a hill of considerable eminence, beyond which a valley of a mile broad called by the people an intervale, lay extended. This peice of land, from over tillage was worn out, and belonged to a man who keeps a tavern by the road-side. Near the top of the hill, on the side nearest the valley, was a deep pond-a strange place, it is true, for such a thing to exhist, but the nature of the ground made a permanent lodgement of water in the hill perfectly natural. Near this pond stood a rude enement, in which there lived a woman, looked upon in the neighborhood with great distrust and suspicion. She had a little girl with her, a child of five years of age, whom she called her daughter, and who was her only companion in the huvin which she lived.

A farmer who resided in the outskirts of the town, upon opening the door one morning, discovered this poor girl barefooted and ragged, crouched beneath the eaves of the house, and seemingly very much terrified. When he questioned her, she said she had come to tell him something dreadful, but she feared her mother would kill her for doing so.

who wood sir, Libink it is right that I should a traveller, who had stopped at her house.-It had stormed dreadfully during the night, and a strange man she said had come to the lonely hut, looking for shelter. He had gone to sleep, stretched upon the floor before the fire, and hearing a groan in the night she woke up, and saw her mother killing the stranger with a knife. She lay still in great terror, and saw her mother take money from the man's pockets and hide it, and then drag the body in a narrow space behind the chimney, and cover it with brush-wood used for fuel, after which the miserable murderess crept into her bed by the child's side. The poor girl could not sleep, and at the first peep of morning she saw her mother rise again, drag the body from the chimney, to the pond, at the back of the house, tie stones to it, and with a long pole, forced it down into the thick mud at the bottom. Terrified, pale, almost speechless with fear, the little girl fled from her mother's habitation, and ran a mile to a farmer's house, to relate these horrid details.

Of course the alarm was instantly given, and terrible excitement flew through the town and among the neighbors for miles around .and a large crowd of people assembled at the woman's dwelling. The unhappy wretch instantly turned pale, ane exhibited every sign of guilt-first refusing the officers admission -then forcing herself between them and the chimney, as if eager to retard investigation but still vociferously asserting her innocence An officer got behind the chimney and picked up a large knife, which together with the floor The young man paused a moment, in em- around, was newly clotted with blood; but the barrassment, then shook the hand of his friend, woman continued insolently to deny her guilt, turning into the opposite street walked hastily having been whipped the night before. Still the body did not appear, and after a thorough examination of the black bottom of the pond, vague suspicions of some other kind of roguery began to be entertained by the crowd. The child was again examined, the pond again scraped, and the "intervale," over which the dark sediment and filth of the pond now lay a foot deep, was carefully inspected in all directions, and still the dreadful mystery was not unravelled. The evidence of the child, the pole, the money, the blood, the woman's strong appearance of guilt, all proved that a heartless and horrid human butchery had been perpetrated, and the fruitless search after the body seemed but to add new horror to the excitement;-Who was the unfortunate stranger?—Evident ly some traveller from a distance. for nobody in the neighborhood was missed. Why could not the body be found? Ten thousand conjectures flew around, each of which added to the perplexing mystery. A strange uncertainty forced itself upon the minds of the people. By all appearances, it appeared certain that the murdered man had never been thrown into the pond at all; yet that the bloody deed had been perpetuated was, from the evidence, conclusively established.

Thus the affair continued enveloped in darkness, and all hope was abandoned of discovering the body. The woman could not be convicted upon the evidence of the child, and that evidence itself could not be substantiated without finding the body. So while every peron was saushed of her guilt, it was law. One, with unminering obstitutey, The farmer quieted the child's fears, and then heard from her the horrid relation that her mother had last night murdered and robbed confinement, no possibility appearing of ever being able to secure her conviction.

A few months passed on, and the "intervale," upon which the pond had been emptied and which before had almost been worthless, now grew to be a flourishing piece of land, and people would remark that the draining of the big pool had at least proved a good thing to the Yankee tavern keeper, who owned the land below. Now for the development of this mysterious tragedy. A quarrel occurred between the heroine of this story and the inn-keeper of the intervale. In her exasperation, she came forward and threw a blaze of light upon this plood chilling mystery, which at once opened all eyes with astonishment. A scheme was laid open, the cunningly devised wheels of which could never have been set in motion but by a genuine bred and born and thoroughly educated, son of Yankee land. The tavern-keeper wanted his land improved; he wanted the pond turned on to it, and soon hit upon a plan to have the job done free of expense. He laid awake three nights, matured his plan, contracted with the poor woman for fifty dollars, to put it in operation, and she with the assistance of a consummately artful child, carried it out. She killed a pig, smeared a knife and a pole, taught her child the story to tell, and acted out the game worthy of the best living representative of Lady Macbeth. The tavern keeper had furnished the thirty dollars of the murdered man's money, but when his object was gained, he refused to pay the fifty, not caring a pin whether the woman would expose his plan or not. This led to a grand development, and thus our thrilling narrative of A New Hampshire Mystery, gentle reader, turns out to be neither more nor less than a super-excellent and surpassingly executed Yankee trick.

EAU LUSTRAL HAIR RESTORATIVE. To lose one's hair prematurely, is a great mi-fortune. To see it fall off forever, under the weight of age, is a cause of affli tion; and i is only then that we are fully impressed with the iden, that to create is grand and eautiful; but to stop decay in the midst of its career .-o preserve what is beautiful, in spite of years, -is certamly great and beneficent;—and this is the prodigy which art, nided by experience, has succeeded in effecting. The Hair Restorative bears the remedy to those physical calamities,—stop the falling off of the hair, promotes its growth, vivilies the roots and the skin, and endows it with a new vigor.

The Eau Lustral has gone through its first experiments, and its success is a problem that has been solved. utation it has met with, by its increasing p pularity.

N preparing ariffical teeth for all sorts of months, a thousand difficulties arise, that but few are qualified to overcome. This is especially the case with whole and half sets. It is not only necessary that the plates on which the teeth are mounted have a perfect and easy fit, with a suction sufficiently powerful to confine them to the law, without those troublesome amondages, so comto the jaw, without those troublesome appendages so commonly worn, the spiral springs; but the exact proportions of all the teeth and gums to be inserted, must correspond of all the teeth and gums to be inserted, must correspond in every particular with those given us by nature: and to accomplish this in the ordinary way is wholly impossible. As no definite rule can be laid down for the guidance of the manufacturer, of course, much will depend on the experience, ingenuity, and correct taste of the artist, in combining in the work all that is requisite for perfect substitute. By the loss of the natural teeth, the organs of speech are scriously affected, and will remain so, to a very considerable extent, until the restoration of the dental sounds. This cannot be effected without restoring to the mouth the exact and precise amount it has lost. If the substitute have more or less in amount, the speech will betray it,—the cheeks and lips by their unatural appearance will declare it, and mastication would be awkward in the extreme. Vegetable Phy anthropic Pills. WHE Proprietors take this method of making known to the world the most valuable and importan discovery ever recorded in the history of medicine.

In testing by chemical experiment, the medicinal prop erties of a rare plant, which grows along the banks of the Wapsepinicon River, in Iowa, they discovered that it possessed a healing and restoring power, which in their opinion, in combination with other remedies, the result of their medical researches, would render it a

or a suffering world. The remedial powers of this plant were tested with the least possible delay, and in hundreds of instances, they proved fully adequate to the complete and perfect removal of disease in any and every form, and it is confidently beleived that the remedy is destined to produce an entire revolution in the medical world. Facts in their possession fully warrant them in making the as-tounding announcement, that it immeasurably surpasses in its power to uproot and experdesease, every other medi-

FOR THE COURIER. MORNING HYMN.

The Morning breaks; awake my soul; Rise with the first bright beam of light, Arouse thyself and backward roll The clouds which smother thee in night

Like the bright san, thy onward course Commence and run without delay, Copy his energetic force Nor dread a dark and stormy day.

Press onward! darkness soon shall fly; Take courage; mists shall disappear; Hopes shining beacon lights thy sky, Throw to the winds each doubt and fear. Danvers Plains.

THE CHILDREN.

BY MARY HOWITT. Beautiful the children's faces! Spite of all that mars and sea To my inmost heart appealing; Calling forth love's tenderest feeling; Steeping all my soul with tears.

Eloquent the children's faces-Poverty's lean look which saith, Save us! save us! woe surrounds us; Little knowledge sore confounds us: Life is but a lingering death!

Give us light amid our darkness; Let us know the good from ill; Hate us not for all our blindness; Love us, lead us, show us kindness-You can make us what you will.

We are willing; we are ready; We would learn, if you would teach; We have hearts that yearn towards duty; We have minds alive to beauty; Souls that any heights can reach!

Raise us by your Christian knowledge; Consecrate to man our powers; Let us take our proper station; We, the rising generation, Let us stamp the age as ours!

We shall be what you will make us; Make us wise, and make us good! Make us strong for time of trial; Teach us temperance, self-denial, Patience, kindness, fortitude!

Look into our childish faces; See ye not our willing hearts ? Only love us-only lead us; Only let us know you need us, And we all will do our parts.

We are thousands-many thousands! Every day our ranks increase; Let us march beneath your banner, We, the legion of true honor. Combating for love and peace!

Train us! try us! days slide onward, They can ne'er be ours again; Save us. save! from our undoing! Save from ignorance and ruin; Make us worthy to be MEN!

Send us to our weeping mothers, Angel-stamped in heart and brow; We may be our father's teachers; We may be the mightiest preachers, In the day that dawneth now!

Such the children's mute appealing, All my inmost soul was stirred; And my heart wes bowed with sadness, When a cry like summer's gladness, Said, "The children's prayer is heard!"

A son of St Crispin called on a neighboring blackamith, to get the steel corks of his horse's shoes sharpened, and being in great haste he askedfeet in my forge, I'll try.

EXAMINATION

SATURDAY MORNING, Feb. 19. Isanc Stone jr. examined. Mr. Kehew came to my shop on Monday morning -we went to the well and examined the ice, which had been broken or cut, and the cakes were thrown on one side of the hole which had peen made-the old ice was of a light color, the new was clear. Mr Kehew went one way from the well, and I went another way towards my shop-met Mr. Day, the jailor, and asked him to go and look at the well. He asked what reason I had to think there was any thing there-stated to him that the ice had been broken or cut, and mentioned its different colors-left Mr. Day and went to my shop, 31 North street, to see to my fire. When I returned to the well, a hole had been cut, and they were drawing something up with gaff-went into the well, put my arm down in the water, took hold of the man's hair, and, with the as-istance of several others, drew the body up, and assisted in taking the body to the nearest building. When he went to the well, he did not discover any man's tracks

Cross ex.-Examination was made in order to dis cover whether any man's tracks could be seen—examined most carefully on the north side-did not discover any tracks except those made by Mr. Kehew, Mr. Day and myself. The broken snow was on the southwest side of the well, in a n umber of places-could not make up my mind what caused it. The broken snow occupied about 6 feet square, and was from 1 to 5 feet from the well-thinks there were also broken places in the snow between the well and the lane leading to Federal street, some of them within a foot of each other—can not tell how many there were-from 6 to 12, perhaps more. Saw the gaff which was used in drawing up the body-it was a boat hook, about 12 feet long, and had an iron point. Several paths in the vacant lot, leading from the well to North street, which have probably been made by persons visiting the place since the discovery. Thinks the new ice was about 6 inches thick-did not measure it. Has known the well for a dozen yearsthe water has looked very dirty. In the 6 feet square of broken snow before spoken of, perhaps half the surface was broken.

MARKED DOWN

TWSNTY-FIVE PBR 0 NT.

In consequence of the very mild weather of the Season, thus far and the great quantities of Garments made by the undersigned this Fall for Market Mark the manufacturer, of course, much will depend on the experience, ingenuity, and correct taste of the artist, in combining in the work all that is requisite for perfect substitute. By the loss of the natural teeth, the organs of speech are seriously affected, and will remain so, to a very considerable extent, until the restoration of the dental sounds erable extent, until the restoration of the dental sounds. This cannot be effected without restoring to the mount tice exact and precise amount it has lost. If the substitute have more or less in amount, the speech will betrey it,—the cheeks and lips by their unnatural appearance will declare it, and mastication would be awkward in the extreme. If the teeth have been removed by disease, and much of the dental ridge and jaw by absorption, science must seek out a remedy, and art must apply it. This has been u cessially done—the great desideratum has been reached, sandthe subject is no longer invested with doubt and uncertainty. All that is requisite, is found in the CARYED sandthe subject is no longer invested with doubt and the crawk D work; where the artist may contend even with nature for the mastery. In this new style of work, the whole substitute, jaw, gums, and teeth, are wrought from an impersibable mineral composition, with all the exact proportions of nature, with its life-like tints and shades.

The correctness of this theory must be obvious to all who will give the subject a numeral's consideration.

who will give the subject a moment's consideration. It addresses itself to, and is in accordance with, the dictates of common senso; and in no other way can a good sety teeth be got up, that will give entire satisfaction. There teeth be got up, that will give entire satisfaction. Therare many other advantages in this mode of preparing ant, setting artificial teeth, that can only be understood and appreciated by an examination of specimens that may been at the subscriber's office. They consist of whole and half sets, and a variety of cases of smaller magnetude, where much difficity of execution is overcome.

In addition to the above, not less important to the community is that of filling teeth in a thorough and skilful manner. Probably not more than one dentist out of wen

HEALTH in every curable disease. There are thousands who have been cured by these vegetable medicines, and miny of them after they were pronounced incurable and given up by some of the most cumient physicians and surgeons of the United States. Many can bare testimony to those facts, it having been but a short time before they were restored to their qual health and strength. They were restored to their qual health and strength. They will also testify that these medicines have been the means of saving their lives after every other effort has failed. I could add thousands of certificates of some of the most remarkable and assonishing cures effected by these medicines, which have long since established the fact that they have hy fair exceeded alt other remedies ever offered to the public. I know that the large number of the citizens of Boston and vicinity are too well acquainted with the great success which has attended my practice, to require a recommendation. I would say that the universal success at tending my treatment of disease, through the blessing of a kind Providence, has astonished more persons than any other forty physicians put together. Yes, and I will leave to judge. I think I have unquestionably had four times as many patients as any three physicians in Boston, and it is admitted by my patients as any three physicians in Boston, and it is admitted by my patients are always the physicians in Boston, and it is admitted by my patients as any three physicians in Boston, and it is admitted by my patients as any three physicians in Boston, and it is admitted by my patients as any three physicians in Boston, and it is admitted by my patients are always the first part of the cure. STRONG & OSGOOD'S Vegetable Phy anthropic Pills. THE Proprietors take this method of making known to the world the most valuable and importan liscovery ever recorded in the history of medicine.

In testing by chemical experiment, the medicinal properties of a rare plant, which grows along the banks of the Wapsepinicon River, in Iowa, they discovered that it possessed a healing and restoring power, which in their opin-ion, in combination with other remedies, the result of their medical researthes, would render it a

or a suffering world. The remedial powers of this plant were tested with the least possible delay, and in hundreds of instances, they proved fully adequate to the complete and perfect removal of disease in any and every form, and it is confidently beleived that the remedy is destined to roduce an entire revolution in the medical world. Facts in their possession fully warrant them in making the as-ounding announcement, that it immeasurably surpasses in its power to uproot and expe' d sease, every other medicine now known.

ment of all, it effected complete and permanent cures; thus brilliantly triumphing, not only over the greatest rem-edies known to the medical, profession, but over all the Pills, Syrups and Panaceas, whose virtues are so loudly rumpeted throughout the length and breadth of the land.

'I don't know that it's necessary,' I replied; 'I think if we let him alone, it will pass off in the course of a few honra.'

'A few hours! He may die in half an hour.' 'I don't think the case is so dangerous, madam.'

"Apoplexy not dangerous!" 'I hardly think it apoplexy,' I replied. 'Pray what do you think it is, Doctor?'

Mrs. ____looked anxiously into my face, I delicately hinted that he might, possibly, have taken too much brandy; but to this she positively and in-

It was most providential that I discovered you mediately removed this instrument of torture, but the which they will sell by the glass, the bottle, the barrel circulating medium. But he still lay as insensible as before, much to the distress of h s poor wife.

'Something else must be done, Doctor,' she urged, seeing that bleeding had accomplished nothing. Af my husband is not quickly relieved, he must die."

By this time, several friends and relatives: who had been sent for, arrived, and urged upon me the necessity of some more active means for restoring the sick man to consciousness. One proposed mustard plasters all over his body; another a blister on the head; another his immersion in hot water. I suggested that it might be well to use a stomach pump.

'Why, Doctor?' asked one of the friends.

Perhaps he has taken some drug,' I replied. 'Impossible, Doctor,' said the wife. 'He has not been from home to-day, and there is no drug of any

Let it remain on for two hours, and then make use of the ordinary dressing, said Dr. S-....... 'If he should recover during the action of the blister, don't feel uneasy. Sensibitity will be restored soon after. I did not call again, but I heard from Dr. S---- the

After we left, the friends stood anxiously around the bed upon which the sick man lay; but though the blister began to draw, no signs of returning consciousness showed themselves further than an occasional low moan or an uneasy tossing of the arms. The expenses incident to the fire department have been much less than in former years; and there will be found some saving to have been made in the department under the care of the Overseers of the Poor.

The promptness and accuracy with which the duties of Collector of taxes have been discharged for three years past, has saved the town, in our opinion, compared with former years, more than all that has been allowed for collecting.

DEATH OF MR. ADAMS.

We announced in our last, he death of the vener The following circumstances connected with this event, we copy from the National Intelligencer: In the House of Representatives, on Monday, Feb.

21st, just after the year and nays were taken on a question, and the Speaker had risen to put another question to the House, a sudden cry was hoard on the left of the chair, "Mr. Adams as dying!" Turning our eyes to the spot we beheld the venerable man in the act of falling over the left arm of his chair, while his right arm was extended, grasping his deak for support. He would have drepped upon the floor had he not been cought in the arms by the remarks the floor had he not been caught in the arms by the member sitting next him -A great sensation was created in the House; members from all quar erarushing from their scats and round the fallen statesman, who was unmediately life ed into the area in front of the Clerk's table. 'The Speaker instantly suggested that some gentleman move an adjournment, which being promptly done, the House ad ourned. A sofa was brought and Mr. Adams, in a state of parfect helplessness, though not of entire insensibility, was gently laid upon it. The sofa was then taken up and borne out of the Hall into the Rotunda, and the members of both houses and strangers who were fast crowded around, were with some diffic ed and an open space cleared in its immed ate v cintty; but a medical gen: leman, a member of the House, (who was prompt, active and self-possessed through the whole trying scene,) advised that he be removed to the door of the Rotunda opening on the east portice, where a fresh wind was blowing. This was done; but the air being chilly and loaded with vapor, the sofa was, at the suggestion of Mr. Winthrop, once more taken up and removed to the Sp aker's apartm or, the doors of which were forthwish closed to all but professional gentlemen several of whom arrived in succession, as spread into the city. While lying in the apartmant Mr. Adams partially recovered the use of his speech, and observed in faltering accents, "This is the end of earth;" but quickly added I am composed." Members by this time reached Mr A's abode with the melancholy intelligence, and, soon after Adams, with his nephew and nicce, arrived, made heir way to the appalling scene.

He lingered, to all appearance insensible and unconscious, from the appearance of his attick, on Monday, until Wednesday evening, about 7 o'clock, when he gently breathed his last, and his spirit returned to God

Many interesting incidents are narrated in connection with this memorable event, a few of which we subjoin The express says that when Mr Adams recovered his consciousness partially he requested that Mr Clay might be sent for and in due time that gentleman made his appearance. When the latter looked upon the prostrate form of his old co-laborer and well-tried friend, he was rus, near Sweetser's Mills, to unite with the Eastern deeply affect, grasped the hands of the dying patriot, hold it and wept with strong emotion. It was not an his power to do any good, however, and he remained only for a short time; but the scene he had witnessed made

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore A. merican says that, during the night of Tuesday, "other watchful auxiety of the physicians, the Massachusetts Delegation, the Speaker of the house, and numerous citizens, was unwearied. The correspondent of the express says that, about six weeks ago, "the Mayor of Washington and several other gentlemen waited upon Mr Adams, for the purpose of obtaining his consent to deliver an address on the 22d of Fobruary, in behalf of the Washington Monument Asso-Lake Rock Granite Company, for a Branch Railroad rom the Maine Railroad at South Reading, to their feel a deep interest in the orection of the proposed Monument, and, as I have never had a fitting opportunity of speaking directly upon the memory of Wasington, is Newburyport to Lawrence, through West Newbury and would afford me great pleasure to comply with your re-East Bradford, in connection with the Boston and Maine quest; but, gentlemen, I am an old man; my voice is feeble, my body weak, and I can not tell what shall be on the morrow. In two days, I may be beyond the reach of every monument, and all my friends and I can not promise; no, gentleman, I can not promise. Mutual Fire Insurance Equalized. Sourcefuence Empirecty New.

HE Atlantic Mutual Fire Insurance Company, chartered by the Legislature of New Hampshire, June Session, 1847, are prepared to take risks against Fire, on most any description of property, on reasonable terms. The risks are divided into four separate classes, viz :- The first class consists of farm risks exclusively. The second class consists of dwelling houses and contents, and harns in towns and villages exclusively. The es, and other property not more bazardons. The fourth class consists of factories, mills of various descriptions, machinery, mechanics' shops, and of other property not more in zardous. The charter provides that each class shall bear its own lesses, and the classification is based npon actual information taken from the books of some of the largest offices in New England. The four classes are equivalent to four offices, but will be attended with the expense of but one. This is believed to be the mosts

From the Odd Fellow. AN INQUIRY.

BY MISS C. ALLEN. They say that man alone bath right, To lay on Love's bright shrine The offering of Affection's heart, Devotion's holy sign. Now let me ask, why 'tis denied To woman the same claim: Why cannot she e'er use the power, Although her cause be lame? Is man afraid that we should abuse That freedom of the mind. Anil make rash use of liberty. When love is unconfined? Pelieve me I have often thought If woman could but use The same free rights that man asserts, And her own leved one choose, There would be vast more happy ones Married, than now there are; Life would be far a brighter path If woman did but dare To speak her mind in candid terms To him she chanced to find, Who pleased her fancy, moved her heart, Stirred fountains of hor mind. I have seen one of mental worth And disposition kind, Who loved with fond, devoted heart, But still with soul confined, Yet he know not her love for him, And gaily went his way; While in the confines of her breast Love burned in the brightest ray. And still she fed and nursed the flame, Hoping that he would feel The same emotion fill his heart, And to her side would steal; Bu yet she dored not breathe a word. For fear the world would blame; Then faded died, like some sweet flower, Nor ever spoke his name. Why is it thus? why cannot we Possess bright freedom's power Of offering the man's noble self Affection's sacred flower? Say, would it be less valued then, When offered pure and free, Then when requested thus to yield Our soul's security? Would it be wrong? Hath God denied To us that holy right, Of giving our warm hearts away With love's deep fountain bright? I can but think God would approve, Though custom dis illows;

SYMPATHY.

The soul's devoted vows.

There's a language that's mute, there's a silence can speak,

There's something that cannuat be told: There are words that can only be read on the cheek, And thoughts but the eyes can unfold. There's a look so express ve, so timid, so kind, So conscious, so quick to impart, Though dumb, in an instant it speaks out the mind, And strikes in an instant the heart. This eloquent silence, this converse of soul, In vain we attempt to suppress; More prompt it appears from the wish to control; More ant the fond truth to express. And oh! the delights in the features that shine, The raptures in bosoms that melt; Who, blessed with each other, this converse divine Is mutually spoken and felt.

CURIOUS FACTS IN NATURAL HISTORY.

About the year 1748 some laborers in working a quarry in the neighborhood of Princeton, N. J. for the one with which the college is built, discovered a cayern which contained the entire skeletons of an immense number of the Rattlesnake (Crotalus) The bones were in such quantities as to require two or three carts for their removal. There can be no doubt that this cavern had once a small opening, which was afterwards Some of them have fruited. The best three are the closed by the accidental fall of a stone or some, other age, and others in consequence of the circum mentioned. Mr Humboldt, in that hird volume of his Personal Narrative, hints at an occurrence somewhat similar to the above. I had visited the caverns of the Hariz, these of Franconia, and the beautitur grotto of Treshemienhsiz, in the Carpathian mountains, which are the vast cemeteries of bones of tigers, hyenas, and bears, as large as our horses.' Buckland in his Geology, has an account of a hyena skeleton, discovered in Derbyshire, in a cavernous rock. He supposes the cavern to have been open, and afterwards closed by stalacites; in tances of which are common in Derbyshire .-Into this envern, I conceive,' says he, 'the animal had retired to die, at a period long after the existence of the marine animals which are imbedded in the surrounding

Sir .- I am just informed by the Chairman of the 1st Railroad Committee, that the hearing on the Petition o the Essex Railroad Company, for liberty to extend their road from the New Mills in Danvers through Northfields in Salem, will be pos'poned until after the Report upon the Salem and Lowell Roilroad has been acted on. It is perfectly apparent that the Northfield project was started as an accompaniment of the Phillip s route, (I will not say Cabot route, for it is not entitled to so respectable a name,) and will go to sleep, when that route shall have the go by,-as it undoubtedly will have. Mr Phillips will now begin to find, what he has before been told, that he is in bad company. I never was more surprised than when I saw him moving arm in arm, with Wm. Livingston, Esq. a man so notorious ery honorable mind immediately views with suspicion any project, which he supports. Every one at all acquainted with this subject, will understand at once the entire impossibility of carrying a Railroad through the Massachusetts Legislature in violation of the charteredfaith of the Commonwealth to the Boston and Lowell

From the Richmond Southerner. THE FALL OF MANUFACTURES.

We have read with great interest, the Speech of Mr. Vinton of Ohio. Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means in the House of Representatives, on the bill authorising a Loan of $16,000,000. It is an able, lucid, manly, dispassionate expose of the condition of the Public Treasury. The speech occupies several columns, and we regret our inability to give it a place in our paper. Mr Vinton shows most clearly that those having charge of the fiscal affairs of the government are incompetent, or desire to mislead and hoodwink the people. The expenses of the governmen hove been largev under-estimated, by the Secretary of the Treasury, n every instance; and its receipts as largely over-estimated. These are the true causes of the present demand of the department for the new loan of $16,000, 000. He says that, for the current year, the Secretary has again fallen into the same error. But seven months of the year have passed by, and the estimates already sent in amount to $62,783,660—the whole estimated for the year (ending on the 30th of June next.) as given by the Secretary at the beginning of the last session expenditures in seven months is $17,000,000 more than of Congress, being $45,781,783; that is, the excess of the estimates for the entire year!! And Mr Vinton expresses his fears that the whole amount of deficiencies for the year have not yet been presented to Congress

Mr Vinton says, that if the $16,000,000 now proposed to be raised will most the wants of the government, then the Public Debt at the end of the present dred thousand dollars!

We have learned that the first joint Committee on Railways and Cannals made their Report "on the several petitions for routes of road from Salem through Danvers to Lowell" to the Legislature yesterday. We have received a copy of the conclusion of their report, which we publish below premising that the first part presented by Mr Thurber reports in fivor of the route through South Danvers and Lynnfield by Humphrey's Pond thence down (crossing the Boston & Maine Railroad directo West Reading) to unite with the Boston &

The latter part presented by Mr Sargent, to the coming season, consisting of counts the branch near Humphrey's pond on the COATS, PANTS, VESTS, BUSOMS, COLLARS, SCARFS, grants the branch near Humphrey's poud on the afforesaid road to South Reading. A large majority of the Committee, as we understand it, are also in favor of this.

pany such as is prayed for by a ingree. Wir ments of the best style, and warranted to give entire YOKE PLACE, five doors east of the Market, and have griter accommodate the Danvers people. The following is the sketch as we receive it.

MegThurber in the House of Representatives, yesterday, concluded the Report of the Committee as follows: after giving his reas ons why a road should be granted,—
Your commutee therefore after a careful examination of all the testimony presented, and the relative merits of the two routes, have arrived at the following conclusions: 1st. That the Cabot line possesses no merit over the other as an independent road. 2d. That the difference in the length of the routes being only 48-100 of a mile is too

3d. That the difference in the grade, the highest on the Cabot line being 25 feet, while that on the Wakefield route is 40 feet, which b was shown in evidence could be reduced to 28 feet, being 15 feet without this reduction in favor of the Cabot line, is of less importance in situations in the Town, and but a short distance from the case than it would be if a very large busi- the Essex Rail Road Derot. ess was contemplated upon this road, and es not therefore outweigh other considera-

4th. That the expenses of constructing the Cabot road from Danvers to Tewksbury would Je as great if not greater (as the road is longer) than would be the expense required for the ger) than would be the expense required for the construction of the Wakefield road, and this aside from any expense for a track by the side than to business, to merit a a share of public patronof the Lowell and Lawrence Road from

Tewksbury to Lowell. 5th. That while the citizens of the cities of Salem and Lowell would be equally well accommodated by either route, yet the Wakefield route would accommodate the greater a. mount of way business. Accompanying this report was a bill to incorporate the Lowell and

Salem Union Railroad Co. Mr Sargent, of Cambridge, for a majority of the Committee reported the following, in favor of the petition of T. P. Pingree and others:— Your committee also after a full and careful examination of all the facts in the EUNCIE NICHOLS. and careful examination of all the lacts in the case, and of the probable effects of the construction of this route upon those already existing was of the opinion, that there are no reasonable grounds for the apprehension on reasonable grounds for the Apprehension on the same; rnd all persons indebted to said estate are callenged to make payment to the part of Eastern R. Road Corpoiation re- en upon to make payment to lieving as they do, that the construction of the feb 19 road will not o perate prejudicially to the inroad will not o perate prejudicially to the interest to that corporation. They therefore beport the bill for constructing a branch road from ment of the Lowell and Salem Union, at some point athe Lowell and Salem Union, at some point a-bove Lymnfield to the Boston and Maine Rail late of Danvers in the County of Essex, widow, deceas-ed and has taken upon himself that trust by giving bonds read, at South Reading.
